NEW TYPE OF ROLLERISM.

How it Affects the "Four Hundred" of Corvallis.

The insinuating craze made its appearance in Corvallis about two weeks ago, since which time it has marvelously spread, and laid successful siege to the innermost circles of our best society. The foundation of the disease—for such it is claimed to be by competent authority—is said to be a peculiar microbe, the character of which, it is believed, is very similar to that producing "brain storm." There is no known remedy. It just has to run its course.

The craze has attacked, with great virulence, the organization known as the Barnacle Club. At the club's solicitation, the skating rink was exclusively given over two evenings to the members in order to allow them full scope for exercise of the various forms in which it has taken hold upon the victims.

Previous to these two events the lady Barnacles had been haunting the rink morning and afternoon hence the superior polish which attaches to their gyrations as compared to those of the male Barnacles.

One evening in the earlier time of the epidemic was seen the lithe form of E. E. Wilson hand-in-hand with Tommy Jones, scaling the outer circle of the rink, but before the close of the session he had so far surmounted his difficulties as to glide in the inner circle. Upon the second evening he tore round and round the room with a velocity equal to that of a real Kansas cyclone, and seemed to have equally as little regard for what was in his course. Such was the marked progress of Mr. Wilson.

The evening performances partook of the nature of a dime museum. Much had been said during the week by Prof. McKellips about his performances on rollers, but his reputation as a skater was clouded at once when he shuffled onto the floor in full dress suit and bearing a bottle of arnica and a box of his widely known pain pills.

It is strange how this form of rollerism affects people. Bob Johnson for example, when on the floor imagined that he was a locomotive, and he was evidently not intending any fake business. When his wheels—those on his feet—once began to roll, he couldn't stop, neither could he move to one side. All he was able to do was to give the warning whistles to clear the floor.

Mayor Johnson tore through the crowd so courageously and boldly that nothing could equal it except the Wild West shows now being staged by the original Happy Hooligan.

B. W. Johnson also has it in rather an aggravated form. He claimed exclusive right to the Wild West features as against the pretensions of the mayor. The contention resulted in a compromise, after which they toured the floor as "The Johnson Stars."

Other participants deserve special mention, and they know it, but a number of these have sent in requests to omit their names because of the effect [it] would probably have upon an application for life insurance, while others in the request, had in view the interests of posterity.

DESTROYED BY FIRE.

The Mack Porter Residence on State Road—No Insurance.

Wednesday afternoon the farm residence of Mack Porter, on the state road, with almost its entire contents, was totally destroyed by fire. Mr. Porter and a grandson were in the building at the time the flames were discovered, but being in the upper story the flames were not observed until it was so well under way, that it was deemed useless to undertake to stay its destruction of the building. The occupants lent their endeavors to the rescue of furniture but little of that was removed to a place of safety before the flames drove the workers from the house. The loss is from two to three thousand dollars. It is believed that there was no insurance. The house was erected more than thirty years ago and at that time was one of the best residences in the county. Mr. Porter always kept it in good repair and it was even at this time regarded as a good structure.

Murray & Mack Coming.
