La Follette.

As no other man has done it, he tears the mask from that which is hypocritical and false in the country. The exposure is complete, his arraignment merciless. He knows his subject as few other men know it, and dares to tell it all. All the power of Mammon cannot deter him from telling the story, all the threats and snubs of predatory interests cannot swerve him from his duty. He may be called a demagogue, but he is not. He is a patriot of the school that gave the country birth, and that if his views could prevail would be of untold benefit to its people.

He says that the country is in industrial servitude, and it is true. The iron barons control the price of iron and steel. There are no independent operators because the steel trust won't let them live, just as Rockefeller won't let independent oil operators live. Those who buy steel or iron, and everybody living has to, pays not what it is worth, but what iron masters choose to ask. Everybody who buys sugar, pays not what it is worth, but what Havemeyer sees fit to ask. Everybody who buys coal, pays not what it is worth, but what the trust chooses to ask. In a country rolling in wealth, producing boundlessly, limitlessly, yielding as it never yielded before a few men get the profit, and all the rest are toiling for them. It is the unmixed truth, and magnificent is the man who dares, as La Follette dares, to tell it anywhere and everywhere.

MAY NOT RECOVER.

Flames Caught the Inmates of a Burial Dwelling and one is badly Burned.

The total destruction by fire of the J. B. Maurer home in the Big Elk country, and the serious burns sustained by the owner and his nephew during the fire occurred Sunday night. Mr. Maurer was postmaster and the office was kept in the house. Between 11 and 12 Sunday night the family was aroused by the roar of flames which then enveloped the house. The nephew, Ed Maurer, was asleep upstairs, and the uncle went up to rescue him. The lad, who is aged 16 was found under the bed, having been overcome by the heat and smoke. The bed on which he had been asleep was ablaze with flames. The youth was dragged out and assisted from the building. Both were burned severely, neither for some time afterward being able to see. A telephone message from the scene this morning relates that the elder Maurer is better, but it is doubtful if the boy will recover. Dr. Cathey went over yesterday afternoon, and at 10 o'clock this forenoon was still at the bedside. The house and contents were totally destroyed, involving a loss of about $1,000. It was a two-story structure, and one of the best in the neighborhood.

PULLMAN WON.

The Inter-State Oratorical Contest—A Delightful Occasion.

They were fortunate people who attended the oratorical contest Saturday night. They got their money's worth in a varied and interesting programme. There were three orations, and all were good. According to the judges that by the young woman from Pullman was the best. At least, she got the prize, and so far as known, there were none to say nay. She had a good voice and a very cultured delivery. All the graces incident to enunciation and expression, she utilized. She had a paper that Senator La Follette might, from its sentiment, have mistaken for his own. He need not have been ashamed of it. When Miss Healey had finished, most of those who had listened were really sorry that she was not going to say more. That was why she won.

The other speakers were Mark Weatherford for O. A. C. and Walter Eels of Whitman. Both orations were excellent, and Mr. Weatherford's in particular, was excellently delivered. His rendition was one of the best that has been heard at the college. The subject was "Patriotism Par Excellence." Examples of notable patriotism were recited and conclusions drawn therefrom. The subject of the Whitman representative was "The Curse of Africa" and the outrages by King Leopold of Belgium in the Congo. How human hands were struck from the natives because they do not gather as much rubber as expected, and how the poor victims are shot, maimed and maltreated was a mournful story of human depravity, that it was at least instructive to the audience to be told of. The application was an appeal to the United States to interfere and put an end to the butchery.

In its preparation the oration did not reach the heights of rhetoric and oratory incident to the Pullman oration. The sentences in the latter were double edged and without exception lofty in conception. The whole occasion formed an evening of unusual interest. The program included vocal solos by Miss Edna Allen, Arthur Boquet and Mr. Crawford, a double quartette and encore by a group of Corvallis singers mentioned elsewhere, and two numbers and encore by the student orchestra at the college. The prize for the best oration is $50 worth of books to be selected by the winner.

IS TWENTY CENTS NOW.

Dealers Claim Wool Will Not Be so High as Last Year—Shearing in Progress.

Wool is 20 cents in the local market. Last year the market started off at about the same notch, but advanced until a few choice lots brought 25 cents. The woolen mills of the valley went even higher for such wool as they wanted, paying as high as 27 1/2 cents. Most of the wool sold in Corvallis went at 22 to 23 cents. The understanding is that the local buyers made nothing out of their purchases, and in some cases were lucky to scratch out even. They forced the market all the season and had to hold a long time in order to get out without loss, losing in the meantime, the interest on the investment. Year before last, the price at one time stood at 30 cents, but only a few growers held out long enough to get that figure. Shearing has begun, and a few small lots have already reached the local market. A Portland paper has the following on the wool situation:

The Eastern wool market is very quiet, and the chances are that Oregon growers will realize from 1 1/2 to 2 cents less for their output this year than they did for their last year's clip. This is not because of any prospective increase in the size of Oregon's clip, but because of the condition of the Eastern market, which governs the situation here.

Dealers last year complained a good deal of the manner in which some of the product was put up by growers for the market, and they are renewing the complaint in advance this year, in the hope that it will have some effect. Last year growers packed their fleeces in anything but an attractive manner, and in some cases even left the taglocks on.

Carelessness in packing always works a hardship on the buyers, and it invariably means a less price for the product for the grower, than would obtain if reasonable care were exercised in packing. If producers take the trouble to see that all their wool reaches the market in good condition there would be less complaint from all concerned. The sheep men have something to learn from the fruit men in this matter.

Some shearing has already been done in the eastern part of the state but as yet shearing is not general, either there or in the Valley. A few sales have been effected at prices ranging from 17 to 18 cents. Valley wool is quoted at 20 to 21 cents.

Resolutions.

Almighty God, the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, in his love and wisdom, has deemed it best to take from us to his home beyond the skies, our beloved brother Oscar Healy.

In view of the loss sustained by his departure by the Corvallis Camp 6029, of the M. W. of A.; by his nearest friends, and still heavier the severe loss sustained by his sorrowing wife and children, to whom he was the nearest and dearest and most precious, be it

RESOLVED, That we tenderly condole and extend to his bereaved wife and children in this dark hour of trial and affliction, our warmest sympathy; that we commend them to the loving father for comfort, strength, and help to sustain them in this the hour of need, who always looks with a pitying eye upon the widow and the fatherless, and does all things for the best.

RESOLVED, That it is only a just and fitting tribute to the memory of our esteemed neighbor, to say, in regretting his removal from among us, we mourn for one who was ever faithful to the task imposed upon him; who was ever a faithful, true, devoted and loyal member of our great Order, fidelity to duty being his motto; who was an honest, upright, honored citizen—a good man, a kind, thoughtful husband, a loving, attentive father.

RESOLVED, That while we deeply mourn with them who knew him best, and loved him most, we share with them the bright hope that heaven gives to the faithful soldier; that the good Shepherd holds in store for those who do his bidding, his will—the hope of that reunion in that better world where sorrows are unknown, where heartaches are forgotten, where there are no more partings, and bliss ineffable forbids all tears.

RESOLVED, That this heartfelt testimonial of our sympathy, our sorrow, our love, our esteem, be forwarded to his sorrowing wife, and be published in the press of our city.
