

—Glen Goodman of Pendleton, is expected to arrive next week for a visit with college friends.

—Oats has dropped in the local market from 40 to 38 cents.

—Examinations at the public school begin Monday. Recitations there end for the year today.

—Congress Hawley is to deliver the oration at the Corvallis celebration of the glorious Fourth.

—A special meeting of the Eastern Star occurs Tuesday evening in Masonic Temple to confer degrees.

—Will Abraham, well-known O. A. C. graduate, called home recently from Schenectady by the illness of his mother, arrived in town today for a visit.

—Mrs. Jesse Spencer, whose condition of health is a matter of concern to her relatives and many friends went to Portland yesterday for medical treatment. She will enter a hospital, and may be compelled to resort to a surgical operation. She was accompanied by her son, Victor Spencer.

—The board of directors have more than a score of applications for the principalship of the Corvallis public schools, made vacant by the resignation of Principal Holmes. Among them are many well-known educators. A selection is to be made about the middle of next week.

—The hint is going the rounds that four or five teachers in the Corvallis public schools will not be candidates for re-election to their present positions. It might not be wickered to add that cupid is up to his capers again and that some people declare the little god to have a hand in the prospective resignations.

—The water commission has purchased the necessary pipe and will shortly begin extensions removing the dead ends at the south ends of the streets between Ninth and Fifth. The pipe costs 20 cents a foot, 13 3/4 cents having been paid for the same size at the time the works was built.

—While it ran in the pasture, a $200 two-year-old colt on the J. W. Hamlin farm across the Willamette was caught and wondrously mutilated by unknown parties. It was so cut and e-rved that the intestines were exposed. The animal died in great agony. There are suspects.

—Wheat is 75 cents in the local market, though the boom in the Chicago market is partly exploded. The reports of damage and shortage of crops, however, are not diminished. That the Oregon crop will be short seems almost certain, both from lack of acreage and lack of rain. Buyers say the export demand is not so stiff as it was, and in the long run it will be the influence that will determine the price, barring the occasional excitement kicked up by the wheat gamblers in Chicago and New York. The prices for Portland are, club, 86 and 87; blue stem, 88 and 90; valley, 86 and 87; red, 85.

—A hot May is unusual in Willamette. It is here this season, however, in all its glory. As specimens of a heated term, yesterday and Wednesday were stem-winders. The thermometer yesterday rose in several places to 90 in the shade, a point more characteristic of mid-summer than of May. Its effect on growing crops and gardens is bewailed. With prevalent drought conditions it is an unhappy situation. The rain, however, will probably come directly, for it never fails in Oregon.

—Corvallis dealers quote three cents as the price for chittim. A trade paper says of the price of bark: "Work in the gathering sections has been commenced, but the low level of prevailing prices offers little incentive to labor. The trees near the forwarding centers have been well stripped and with the necessity of extending operations to remote districts the expense of moving supplies may reasonably be expected to show an increase. The local market assumed a more active appearance late in the week, with inquiries pending for car lots."

—Forty-four athletes for the high school meet tomorrow arrived today noon, and ten more are to come tonight from Astoria, La Grande, Baker City, Pendleton, Island City, Union, and numerous other schools have delegations. The Portland High has eight men. Hill Military Academy seven and the Eastside High in Portland, four. The rivalry for places in the meet will be great and the various events extremely interesting. The Roseburg and the Eugene delegations will arrive on this evening train. The visitors were met at the train, and each delegation is in the hands of a student committee. Tonight there will be a brief reception in their honor and tomorrow night a party in the armory. The meet begins at two o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

and many more must be obtained in the next few days if the rapidly ripening fruit would be got to market. So far fewer pickers have applied for work this year than in any preceding season, although the crop is the best in three years. While more help is coming in, there is not half enough yet to go around. It is expected that shipments will double up for several days until the height of the season is reached with constant picking for several weeks. Growers say that if the shortage in help does not let up before the Grangers leave, they will be invited to stay and help gather the big crop. There is still room for 2000 pickers who will be provided with camping places and work as soon as they can arrive.

Louisville, Ky., May 28.—General George B. Castleman today received a telegram from Adjutant-General Ainsworth at Washington, notifying him that the encouragement across the continent from Oregon to New Jersey between an Arabian stallion and a horse selected by the American Saddle-Horse Breeders' Association has been indefinitely postponed.

The ride was to have been started this week, the object to determine the relative endurance and speed of the American and Arabian horses for the benefit of future breeding and selection of United States cavalry horses. The Arabian stallion which was to have been used was Homer Davenport's stallion Nedjam, and the postponement followed a letter announcing that Nedjam was sick. The American horse selected, Clinton, was brought to this city from General Castleman's farm a week ago.
