As Portland Elected,

In spite of the fact that the voting population is four to one republican, Portland has elected a democratic mayor. The phenomenal result is another manifestation of the trend of the time. Massed on one side was the vicious element and a "machine," and on the other the columns that stand for clean civic conditions and non-partisan government. As is inevitable in such cases, in spite of the claims of party, the better element won. It will continue to be so as time rolls on. The world is getting better, and the standard of citizenship rising. Rowdism and dissipation is waste of substance, and the people are coming to know it. Life, soberly and correctly lived is trial enough without the loss that riotous living entails. It is for the ultimate good of the vicious when they are restrained from excesses, and whether they know it or not, the better element does. The latter is in the majority in every city whenever the issue is brought out squarely, Portland among the rest.

Harry Lane stood for cleanliness and the "public weal" rather than party claims, and he won with a handsome majority to his credit. He is a clean, straightforward citizen, an honest and capable mayor, and his re-election, a credit to Portland. It is a hint to the rest of the state of the trend of the time, which is, that partisan politics, the ward heeler, the rounder and other outward agencies of government are passing.

Though the news dispatch did not specify, the experienced public will insist on believing that the child that talked so glibly at only nine days of age, must have been of the gentler sex.

Having learned that when yet on the stage, Mabelle Gilman Cory became enraged at the stage director and kicked her music into the orchestra, the country is encouraged to hope that her kicking powers may become as perfect as those of a Missouri mule and be turned on her illustrious husband.

For contrariness, the man who has just died at 84, after being given up by the doctors 40 years ago, is the limit.

It is to the credit of both that Mayor-elect Lane of Portland spent his boyhood in Corvallis. If not actually born in the town, his escape from that distinction was narrow. That he had fights with the boys and at one time had a bad case of it here are incidents that Mayor Lane often mentions reminiscently.

CARVED ANOTHER HORSE.

As it had to be Shot—Who did the Deed, is the Question.

A second horse on the farm of J. W. Hamlin, two miles across the Willamette from Corvallis, has paid the forfeit of falling into the hands of man or men more brute than human. How a two-year old colt was cut and slashed in the body until the intestines hung out and the animal had to be despatched, was told recently in the TIMES. It was a 1,300 pound animal and a $200 cash offer for it had been refused by the owner. The hand that did the cutting is not definitely known, though suspicions have from the first been entertained. It now develops that in the midnight visit when the colt was so mutilated, another horse met with the same treatment. The latter was found, horribly cut the other day, and was in such a condition that it had to be shot. There was a long knife slash forward, low down in the flank, but not deep enough to reach the intestines, as had evidently been intended. There was still another slash in the lower abdomen, ranging upward, but it too failed to penetrate the cavity. In the fleshy part of the shoulder were two deep stabs, as though the animal had been restive under the punishment, and the fiend had stabbed it twice in his anger.

The scene of this wanton mutilation of an innocent and faithful horse must have been a grand spectacle for this civilized 20th century. The horse was not found until several days after the colt was killed, though both are supposed to have been attacked at the same time.

Both horses belonged to J. W. Hamlin, who is an estimable and honorable citizen. He has resided in the vicinity for 16 years, and has never had trouble to warrant such procedure. Two years ago Herman Stahlbusch told him John was getting to be a bad man, and that it was a hard matter to do any thing with him. The case is one that calls for a vigorous investigation, and a penalty to fit the crime.

SHEDD-WIMBERLY WEDDING.

Celebrated at Presbyterian Church Wednesday Noon.

Promptly at twelve Wednesday, Washington State College grasped hands with O. A. C. This union was prompted by the matrimonial alliance celebrated at this hour between Professor Solon Shedd, of the former, and Mrs. Jeannette Bell Wimberly, of the latter college. The ceremony took place at the First Presbyterian church of Corvallis, Dr. J. R. N. Bell, the bride's father officiating.

There were present three score or more of the bride's friends, who were escorted to their seats by the ushers, E. E. Wilson and J. B. Horner. The artistic floral decorations were due to Mesdames John Smith, Minnie Lee, J. O. Wilson and S. N. Wilkins. After a vocal selection by Miss Essie Bell, Lo-hengrin was rendered by Miss Pearl Horner, while the wedding party marched in, following the flower girls, Helen Smith and Esther Hayes, the latter of whom was also ring bearer. The bride was presented by her brother Lloyd. After the impressive ceremony, the party returned, treading on white roses which covered the walk to the manse. A delightful banquet was awaiting. It was surrounded by banks of LaFrance roses overshadowed by vases that were literally loaded with other roses of many and strange varieties. Candelabra were lighted as the bridal party entered, mingling the mellow pink and heavier garnet of the lamp shades with the softer yellow which the room decorations effected, giving to the banquet halls an effect not wholly unlike the early morning light as it first creeps into a conservatory. This was to represent the morning hour. After an instrumental selection by Miss Vera Horner, breakfast was served. At the close of which, Mr. E. E. Wilson, Professor Shedd, Dr. Cathey, Mrs. Shedd and Dr. Bell responded to toasts, and Miss Lulu Spangler rendered two of her prettiest vocal selections.

The bride was richly dressed in a gown of embroidered jasu especially selected in Manila for the occasion by Miss Lois Stewart, a graduate of O. A. C. Her bearing was commanding and sincere. Professor Shedd is a native son of Linn county. He is a graduate from the Normal school at Monmouth where at one time he held the chair of Natural Science. Upon his departure from Monmouth, he received the degree of Ph. D. at Leland Stanford University, and later accepted the chair of Geology in the State College of Washington, a position which he now holds. On the evening train the couple started East on a wedding tour with the intention of visiting the Jamestown Exposition during their absence; after which time they will go to their new home at Pullman. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, Mr. and Mrs. T. Callahan, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Horner, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Skipton, Mr. and Mrs. Offin Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Shedd, Mrs. S. N. Wilkins, Dr. and Mrs. Cathey, Mrs. E. Skipton, Mrs. E. J. Taylor, Mrs. John Burnett, Mrs. Sarah Cauthorn, Mrs. Minnie Lee, Misses Vera Horner, Pearl Horner, Lulu Spangler, Bertha Davis, Iva Maginess, Maud Moore, Iva Elston, Helen Smith, Esther Hayes, Messrs. F. E. Wilson, Roy West, Portland, C. J. Shedd and E. W. Shedd, of Shedd.

—The first letters were received this morning from J. M. Nolan, who left for Ireland more than a month ago. The first was written at Cork, and relates that he was traveling with a party of New York friends, and a young man from Astoria. With the others he visited Blarney Castle and kissed the "Blarney Stone." The latter he says, involved some difficulty, requiring him to lie down on his chest and reach out to kiss the stone. "However, I did a good job, all right," he adds. The other letter was from Dublin, Mr. Nolan's old home. No former friends of the old time had yet been encountered, but he was expecting shortly afterward to start out on a search for them. He will be in Dublin two weeks.

—A petition asking for the division of Wren school district was presented to the boundary board June 5th, and was granted. A new district will be organized with a probability that the new school house will be built at Harris station.
