—A Boston public school teacher was trying to give her pupils a definite idea of a volcano. With red chalk she drew on the blackboard fiery flames issuing from a mountain top. When the drawing was done, she turned to the class before her, and said: "Can any of you tell me what that looks like?" One boy immediately held up his hand, and the teacher said: "Well, Joey, you may tell us." "It looks like hell, ma'am," replied Joey, with starting promptness.

—John Huffman of Portland, is here to begin work on the Kline brick, plans for which have been described in the TIMES. Twenty-five feet is to be added on the north, making the frontage 75 feet. Another story is to be added to the present building. The present front will be changed, providing for but a single instead of the double entrance. The second floor front will be of glass and pressed brick. When completed, the building will be one of the handsomest in town. The whole structure will be utilized by the Kline establishment, which has long been crowded for space. It is hoped to have the work completed early in September.

BURIED AT SACRAMENTO.

Nellie Callahan Smith—Her Death Result of Temporary Insanity.

Details of the death of Nellie Callahan Smith as told in the Sacramento Union explain to her many friends that her death was the result of temporary insanity. Her terrible experiences in the San Francisco earthquake, in which she was alone with her little son, left her a nervous wreck, in which she was wont to attach over-importance to trivial things. With her husband and little son, she lived in a flat on M street, Sacramento. Her husband is a commercial traveler and at the time of her death was at Eureka, California.

Two months before, neighborhood gossips had brought on a row and some of the people in the house charged Mrs. Smith with spreading the reports. Mrs. Smith was not the person as has since developed, and she smarted much under the false accusation. She magnified the facts in her mind, and so brooded over them that she became mentally unbalanced. The morning of her death, she appeared on the back porch of the flat and fired a revolver off at a mark, apparently to test it. A. D. Carter, occupying the second floor flat approached the rear door to Mrs. Smith's apartments and endeavored to reason with her, trying to get the revolver. He was on the porch and she inside, with a screen door between them. A policeman joined Carter and they used every power of persuasion, but she warned them to approach no closer or she would shoot them and then shoot herself. A patrol wagon and additional men was sent for, and on their arrival, it was planned to attack the house from the front, and overpower Mrs. Smith, who by this time was showing all symptoms of violent insanity. She apparently divined their purpose, and as they were about to break down the door in front, the rear door was suddenly slammed shut, and a moment later the muffled report of the revolver told the melancholy story. She was found on a couch, and died a few minutes later. The ball entered the body just above the heart. A few muttered words, showing that in death her bitterness toward those who had unjustly charged her with spreading the gossip, was an all consuming force. Since the death of Mrs. Smith, a neighbor, Mrs. S. Thomas, has publicly stated that Mrs. Smith was innocent and that she, herself, was responsible for the charges.

Little Robert was at school when the death fell, and is as yet ignorant of his mother's fate. He has not seen her since he left for school that morning. He is at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Callahan in this city, where he will remain indefinitely. Several notes were left by Mrs. Smith, all of which give evidence of mental disturbance, though they are mostly intelligible. She was buried at Sacramento. Relatives and her many friends in this city are deeply moved by her sad fate. She was one of the most popular young women that ever lived in Corvallis.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by Graham & Wortham.
