

Documents reveal overlap in Hayes' work

By HILLARY BORRUD

SALEM — More evidence of the overlap between the private business of first lady Cylvia Hayes and the public policies championed by Gov. John Kitzhaber emerged Friday, when the state Department of Administrative Services and the Governor's Office released hundreds of pages of public records requested by members of the media.

Emails released Friday reveal the close relationship between a group that hired Hayes and state employees working on an alternative measure of Oregon's progress on environmental, socioeconomic and other issues.

Hayes signed a $25,000 contract with Demos, a New York-based policy group, in July 2013.

Her work for Demos included "advising state and county leaders on implementation of GPI," or Genuine Progress Indicator, the specific indicator that Demos advocates for governments to adopt. Lew Daly, director of Demos' sustainable progress initiative, emailed a document related to the GPI to Hayes in September 2013.

"Once we polish it up, Cylvia, maybe you should forward it to the relevant group in the governor's office, for questions, etc.," Daly wrote.

Hayes waited until Jan. 8, 2014, then forwarded the email to Kitzhaber's chief of staff, Mike Bonetto, and Michael Jordan, director of the Department of Administrative Services.

Elektra Gray, director of communications for Demos, said in an emailed statement Friday that Hayes and Kitzhaber's support for the Genuine Progress Indicator predated Hayes' contract.

"Since 2010, Demos has brought together advocates, experts and public leaders to develop ways that governments can measure environmental and human well-being as well as economic output," Gray wrote. "Governor Kitzhaber has been an advocate for such alternative metrics since at least 2001, and Cylvia Hayes was a champion of the issue and sought Demos' technical assistance before any discussions about her consulting for Demos."

It was that experience, she said, that led Demos to hire Hayes "to help advance the idea in other states and nationally."

"Inasmuch as she and the governor have continued their commitment to new measures for progress in Oregon, it was outside of the scope of Demos' six-month consulting contract."

However, the emails released Friday revealed Hayes was actively involved in developing an Oregon GPI at the same time she worked for Demos.

On Oct. 10, 2013, Hayes emailed Jordan with a job description for an employee the state would eventually hire to implement the GPI.

"Here are my thoughts on what the GPI Director will need to do," Hayes wrote. She went on to list "build stakeholder participation and support within and beyond state government," and "work with, leverage, learn from other state GPI efforts."

The Department of Administrative Services eventually hired an employee, Sean McGuire, in March 2014 to fill the position Hayes described, according to records released by the Department of Administrative Services.

Kitzhaber asks for AG to investigate

By HILLARY BORRUD

SALEM — Gov. John Kitzhaber this morning asked Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum to investigate questions surrounding first lady Cylvia Hayes and her dealings with the administration.

Kitzhaber asked Rosenblum to launch a "review" because of the media's focus on the overlap between Hayes' paid consulting jobs and her unpaid work as policy adviser, as well as the role of Kitzhaber associates in helping Hayes obtain some of those jobs. Public records released Friday revealed that Hayes directed state employees' work to adopt an economic indicator called the Genuine Progress Indicator, at the same time she was paid by a New York-based group to advocate for governments to adopt that specific indicator.

OBITUARIES

Jean Ann (Mognett) Weston Gearhart

Feb. 20, 1925 — Jan. 24, 2015

Jean Ann Weston, 89, passed away peacefully Jan. 24, 2015, at her home in Gearhart, Ore. Jean was born in Glendale, Ariz., Feb. 20, 1925, to Elmer and Delta Mognett.

Her family moved to Tigard, Ore., in 1928, where Jean became a childhood vaudeville star. Jean spent most of her childhood years performing in the Portland area, and was able to earn money necessary to help her family survive the years of the Great Depression.

Jean graduated from Tigard High School and was attending the University of Oregon up until World War II broke out, when she volunteered to leave school, move to San Francisco, and work in the shipyards building ships for the war effort.

After the war Jean moved back to the Portland, Ore., area where she met and married Raymond E. Weston Jr. The newlyweds lived six years in Portland before moving to Spokane, Wash., where their two children, Craig and Kyle, were born. In 1959, Jean's family moved to Gearhart, Ore., where she became involved with local clubs and organizations and her husband, Raymond, became the pro at the Gearhart Golf Course.

Jean is survived by her two sons, Craig Weston (wife, Dana) and Kyle Weston; grandson, Tyler Weston (wife, Fellicia); and great-grandson, Cooper Raymond Weston. Jean was predeceased by her husband, Raymond, in 1980.

A celebration of Jean's life will be held at the Astoria Golf & Country Club on Sunday, Feb. 15, 2015, at 2 p.m. A private graveside service for the family will be held at Finley's Sunset Mortuary in Portland.

Contributions in Jean's memory can be made to Clatsop County United Way, Seaside Kids or the Calvary Episcopal Church of Seaside.

James M. 'Stogie' Hill Svensen

Sept. 7, 1944 — Jan. 26, 2015

Jim Hill, voice of Sunday afternoon classic rock and roll show on KMUN for more than 30 years, died Jan. 26, 2015, from his latest battle with cancer. A native Astorian, AHS Class of 1962, Jim never met a person who didn't receive a genuine smile, a cheery conversation, a honk and wave or a gentle pat on the back. You could find him at the counter at Stephanie's Cabin most mornings, sharing his crossword puzzle and laughter. His friendships were his treasure.

He really loved the opportunity to share the music from those good old high school days through Coast Community Radio. This volunteer avocation held his interest longer than his paying jobs at local canneries, sawmills, Astoria Plywood Mill and Tongue Point Job Corps Center. His volunteer work also included service on Clatsop County committees, assisting at the local food bank and helping announce and organize a variety of horse shows in the 1970s, including 4-H and Morgan breed shows throughout the Northwest. Jim is known for his tomato soup, banana bread and caramel corn!

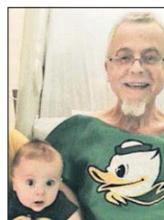

The fifth child in his family, Little Jimmy was born to Otto G. And Myrtle W. (Wartenbe) Hill in Astoria, Ore. He attended Astoria public schools and played baseball and basketball. Siblings include Gaylord (deceased), Louetta Booker, Thana Arant, Connie Jacobs and David Hill.

He married Jane (Maki) Hill in May of 1964, and the family has lived in Svensen since 1974. Daughter Alicia (Sam) Hess of Astoria; son Jim R. Hill (Wendy) of Salem; grandchildren Krysta M. (Damian) Houseknecht of Bay Center, Wash., Steven D. Hess of Astoria, Sean A. Hill of Fort Worth, Texas, and Kaytlyn R. (Jeff) Morris of Kenai, Alaska; and great-grandson is Sawyer L. Houseknecht. Bonus grandchildren include Arron T. Coffett, Meagan J. Shaw-Hill, and Chase C. Wilson. Finally, there is a broad spectrum of cousins, nieces and nephews in this close, supportive family.

You are invited to wear Hawaiian or golf garb to his celebration of life on Thursday, Feb. 12, 2015, at 2 p.m., at the Astoria First United Methodist Church, 11th and Franklin. In addition, there will be a "sock hop" dance and KMUN fundraiser at the Astoria Moose Lodge on Sunday, March 8, from 1-3 p.m. Suggested memorial donations are to OHSU/Cancer care or KMUN/Coast Community Radio.

As Jim would say, "See you on the flipside! It's been a good run." Come, join our celebration.
