Enjoy 'Big Night' meal at Fulio's
Then watch the film at Columbian Theater

ASTORIA — "Big Night" is an award-winning film about a failing Italian restaurant's last glorious banquet. It is also the grand finale of North Coast Food Web's Food Film Festival, one part of a capital campaign to fund a teaching kitchen to benefit anyone in the community who longs to learn to cook, has health-related dietary challenges, needs an infusion of enthusiasm for the art of cooking or is looking to create fabulous meals on a tiny budget.

Mark your calendars for Saturday, April 11 and bring a friend to Astoria's historic Columbian Theater to enjoy this classic food film starring Stanley Tucci, Tony Shaloub, Isabella Rosselini and the meal you will never forget. Donations at the door and proceeds from special movie-themed appetizers will benefit the construction of the kitchen at NCFW's new home at 577 18th St.

With the completion of the kitchen this spring, NCFW will launch Cooking Up Community, a series of classes aimed at polishing skills, discovering the bounty of fresh ingredients to be found locally, improving collective health and igniting a passion for cooking from scratch. The project was recently awarded a $35,000 grassroots grant from Meyer Memorial Trust. The funding will support the first year of hands-on classes designed to address a wide range of needs and age groups.

As part of the "Big Night" celebration, Peter Roscoe, chef and owner of Fulio's Pastaria and Tuscan Steakhouse in Astoria, will be cooking a special "Big Night dinner." When Big Night first premiered in 1996, Roscoe was inspired to host a weekly recreation's of the film's elaborate banquet meal at his Portland restaurant, Cozze.

"It became a runaway hit for me," Roscoe says. "Still to this day, I get people visiting Astoria who talk about those dinners."

In support of NCFW's work, Roscoe is hosting a six-course "Big Night" banquet at Fulio's with a portion of the proceeds going to the kitchen project. Seating is limited and reservations are required. Tickets are $60 each and can be reserved by calling Fulio's at 503-325-9001.

The ultimate dinner-and-a-movie night out begins with dinner at Fulio's at 5 p.m., a stroll through downtown Astoria's Second Saturday Art Walk and ends with a 9:30 p.m. showing of the film at the Columbian Theater. A film-specific cocktail will be featured in the Columbian's Voodoo Room cocktail lounge prior to the show, and themed small bites will be offered by NCFW's Accidental Catering team.
