

Sign up for Summer Art Camp in Cannon Beach

CANNON BEACH — The Cannon Beach Arts Association announces the 13th annual Summer Art Camp will return to the Cannon Beach Community Church for the week of July 13 to 17. The church is located at 132 E. Washington St. Morning classes are held from 10 a.m. to noon, with afternoon classes from 1 to 4 p.m. In addition to the full-week classes, CBAA will offer several workshops Wednesday through Friday only. Classes are available for all ages, from preschool through adult.

This year's camp will feature many of the most popular classes from last year, as well as half a dozen new topics for exploration. Hannah Nebeker's Creative Kid Explorers will provide ages 3 to 5 an opportunity to navigate hands-on, openly creative activities. Ireta Sitts-Graube will lead her perennially popular watercolor class for ages 5 to 8, featuring an exploration of creatures from outer space. Karen Mei-li teaches Kid's Yoga for ages 5 to 12. Lisa Kerr's Jewelry Design class features use of lettering tools for inscribing words on copper metal charms. CBAA welcomes Sue Scheewe-Brown to its teaching staff this year. This renowned art teacher from the Create Channel on PBS will share her knowledge of watercolor techniques with ages 10 to adult.

In the afternoons for the full week, Drenda Duff will teach Painting with Pastels, a colorful class with many innovative projects for ages 8 to 12. Sarah Lippold's Canvas Creations class for ages 5 to 12 allows children to participate fully in all stages of the creative process. Barbara Temple Ayres will teach ages 9 to adult how to make a beautiful book to be filled with colorful sketches and journal entries. Susan Simon will teach the art of encaustic painting to ages 13 and up. This exciting medium uses pigment and hot wax to achieve a remarkable quality of work. Jessica Sund will teach weaving, a new topic for this year's roster.

Four three-day workshops will be offered Wednesday through Friday. They include a morning class led by Sarah Lippold on learning to use a printing press for printmaking from original creations. In the afternoons, Dorota Haber-Lehigh will teach a class called World Art Adventure, combining examination of famous architectural icons with drawing techniques, painting and collage.

CBAA also welcomes two new visiting instructors from the Portland area to teach workshops. Sarah Ostaszewski, a fine arts graduate of Indiana University, will teach Form and Color in the Landscape for ages 12 to adult. Sam Loper, a film and video arts graduate of the Maryland Institute College of Art, will teach solar photography technique to make "photographs" on a variety of surfaces.

food or personal hygiene items for the food bank. (More door prize tickets will be given if you bring extra food.)

Although the crop is all day, you don't have to stay all day. Admission to the event also entitles participants to chances for the door prizes, the mini workshops, and lunch, which will be provided by Astoria Subway, Kips Kandy, T.Paul's Super Club and T.Paul's Urban Café.

Spring is a slow time for donations to the local food banks, so even if you do not want to participate in the crop, this is an excellent opportunity to drop off canned food, pet food, pasta, rice, boxed food, or personal hygiene items.

This event is sponsored by Red Dwarf Graphx. For more information, contact Bobbi Brice or Cindy Miller at StampOutHunger@yahoo.com or check out Stamp Out Hunger's Facebook page.

A limited number of tickets are available on TicketsWest for many of the weekend's activities, like bus tours and panel events, and must be purchased in advance. Organizers advise buying tickets in advance.
