ANIMAL SHELTER*1315 SE 19th, WARRENTON • 503-861-7387*Be Flea preventive!

With the mild winter we just had, this promises to be an especially bad year for fleas. According to the Oregon Veterinary Medical Association, you should watch for adult fleas on your pet or in your house, flea excrement or "flea dirt" on your pet's skin that turns reddish in water, irritated skin and/or excessive itching, or flea eggs that look like salt-sized white ovals.

You can treat adult fleas with topical or oral monthly adulticides and eggs and larvae with Insect Growth Regulators (IGRs) and Insect Development Inhibitors (IDIs). Your veterinarian may recommend a combined integrated control program. Both naturally-based pyrethrins and the synthetic pyrethroids are typically used in treatments.; keep in in mind that while the synthetic is safe for dogs, it is very toxic for cats.

Always check dosage requirements and watch for potential interactions with other medications your pet is taking. And always, if you have any questions about fleas or flea treatment, contact your veterinarian. Your vet is the true expert.
