Knappton Cove Heritage Center hosts an open house, presentation on cholera

NASELLE, Wash. — The Knappton Cove Heritage Center and Quarantine Hospital Museum invites the public to an open house from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 23.

At 2 p.m., hear Portland State University Professor Friedrich Schuler give the presentation “Cholera Causes Quarantine.” Schuler will talk about how cholera impacted the need for a Columbia River Quarantine Station.

Also during the open house, visitors can view a special museum display on U.S. Public Health Service Fallen Comrades, celebrate the plaster repair done by Clatsop Community College historic preservation students, stroll the grounds and view the new healing garden. Light refreshments will be served.

Parents and guardians can also sign up their children for the Aug. 8 Junior Archaeology Day.

The Knappton Cove Heritage Center is a nonprofit organization dedicated to the preservation and interpretation of the historic U.S. Quarantine Station, the Columbia River “Ellis Island,” a National Historic Site. The heritage center is located at 521 Washington State Route 401.
