

Missing Astoria teen found

The Daily Astorian

Kylie Bjaranson, the 15-year-old Astoria girl missing since Tuesday night, was found safe Wednesday, according to the Astoria Police.

The girl told her parents she was going to a friend's house Tuesday night, but did not arrive and was not answering her phone, Deputy Chief Eric Halverson said.

Bjaranson's phone was shut off at the time, according to police.

Astoria Police continued to search and follow leads. Police credit people's involvement on social media by sharing the department's posts to more than 96,000 people.

Advocates celebrate marijuana

The Daily Astorian

Marijuana advocates, along with models and artists from Hempstalk's Live Art Show, are holding "Hemp Hemp Hooray," a coming-out party in Astoria Friday for cannabis.

At 3:30 p.m. Friday, revelers will gather at the Sixth Street viewing platform to be painted with pot leaves.

The group photo will be at 4:20 p.m., a symbolic time to smoke pot in marijuana culture.

The public is welcome to get painted. Organizers encourage attendees to wear red, white and blue colors. Organizers also note that there will not be any cannabis use at the event, as it is illegal to consume in public.

Columbia River salmon season extended with new catch limit

The Daily Astorian

Fishery managers from Washington state and Oregon have extended the summer salmon fishery on the lower Columbia River by three weeks, and approved a new daily catch limit for waters above and below Bonneville Dam.

Under the new agreement, anglers can continue to catch summer Chinook and sockeye salmon through July 31 from the Astoria Bridge upriver to Bonneville Dam, where the season was previously scheduled to end Tuesday.

In addition, the daily catch limit will change Friday for salmon fisheries on the Columbia River upstream to the Oregon/Washington border, 17 miles upriver from McNary Dam.

The new catch limit holds anglers to one adult Chinook salmon per day — whether or not it is marked as a hatchery fish — as part of their overall catch. Since mid-June, anglers have been allowed to catch two adult Chinook a day, but were required to release those not marked as a hatchery fish by a missing adipose fin.

Ron Roler, Columbia River Policy Coordinator for the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife, said the new catch limit is designed to reduce the number of Chinook salmon that are hooked and released during unusually warm water conditions.

"Water temperatures in the Columbia River have risen above 70 degrees, which can affect survival rates for released fish," Roler said. "With the prospect of more hot days to come, we want anglers to keep the first Chinook they catch and move on to the other fishing opportunities available in the river."

Despite warm water conditions, returns of both summer Chinook and sockeye salmon are currently the second-highest on record, said Roler, noting that summer steelhead are also beginning to move into the lower river in large numbers.

In all, the new catch limit will allow anglers to take a total of six salmon or steelhead per day, including two adult salmon, two adult hatchery steelhead, or one of each — but only one adult Chinook salmon. As before, anglers must release any unmarked steelhead they catch, and sockeye will be counted as part of the adult daily limit. Chinook jacks also remain part of the overall daily bag limit, but anglers can retain both marked and unmarked fish.

"We still have plenty of salmon and hatchery steelhead available for harvest," Roler said. "Our goal is to reduce stress on summer Chinook moving up the river in these current water conditions."

OBITUARIES

Louise Helen (Francisovich) 'Franky' Cote Newport Beach, Calif. Sept. 12, 1926 — Jan. 1, 2015

Louise Helen "Franky" Cote passed away peacefully on New Year's Day, 2015, at her son's home in Santa Barbara, Calif., surrounded by her loving family and friends.

She will be remembered by three generations of first-grade students at Mariners Elementary School in Newport Beach, Calif., whom she taught to read, write, count to 100 by ones, and say "please" and "thank you"; by her countless friends on Balboa Island, and all their cats and dogs — for which she always had a treat in her pocket; and by the many golfers who joined her for a round, even those who lost dimes on her friendly wagers for drives in the fairway and one-putts.

Born Sept. 12, 1926, in Astoria, Ore., the daughter of Oregon State Senator and attorney Frank Mitchel Francisovich and Louise Leinenweber Francisovich, Franky was a woman ahead of her time. She was the only female page in the Oregon Senate in 1942, as a teenager was elected president of the Clatsop County 4-H Club, and earned her private pilot license at the age of 20.

She was an outstanding athlete: She was girls' swimming champion at the 1942 Astoria Regatta (the trophy for which has been accepted by the Clatsop County Historical Museum) and a certified life guard; she won the 1956 women's golf championship at Kelly Air Force Base, played golf regularly until she was 85, and had seven holes-in-one; and she was an accomplished ice dancer, a patient ice skating instructor, and a graceful downhill skier. For many years, before starting her teaching career, she played championship-level bridge.

Franky attended Oregon State College in Corvallis, where she earned her degree in home economics and was a sorority member of Alpha Chi Omega. During college, she met and married, on Dec. 21, 1946, Maj. Elmer Lee Cote, who had just served a four-year tour of duty in the U.S. Army Air Force during World War II; first stateside as a flight instructor, then as a ferry pilot in the Ferry Command, and then in the Pacific Theater as a troop and hospital transport pilot, and who was then earning his degree in engineering on the G.I. Bill of Rights.

After their college graduation in June 1947, Elmer joined the U.S. Air Force. During their overseas duty (1948-1951), they were stationed in Athens, Rome, and at the Rhein-Main Air Base near Frankfurt am Main, Germany. They returned stateside, where their two children were born, Christine C. Gress and James F. Cote, both of whom are now attorneys living in Santa Barbara. Elmer retired from the military in 1962.

In 1967, they moved to Newport Beach to live the rest of their lives. Elmer was instrumental in the creation of Air California, a domestic airline based at John Wayne Airport which later merged into American Airlines, and served as its chief pilot until his retirement in 1980. He went on to become an attorney, and specialized in defending pilots in FAA proceedings.

Franky served as the first-grade teacher in Room 3 at Mariners until her retirement in 1983. They were avid golfers and active members of the Newport Beach Country Club, and enjoyed playing civilian and military courses together around the world. Franky cared for Elmer at home during his three-year battle with ALS, until he passed on Dec. 1, 2001.

Franky was completely devoted to her family — and to her students. She taught first grade "on contract" for 25 years, 16 of which were at Mariners. After her formal retirement, she volunteered every day as a teacher's aide at Mariners, tutoring kindergarten and first grade children in reading, writing, and math for 31 more years, right up until ill health forced her to stop, just seven weeks before she died. All told, Franky taught children at Mariners for an amazing length of time — 47 years.

She firmly believed that education was the best investment one could make, because, no matter what happened in life, it could never be taken away.

As everyone who ever met Franky knows, she enjoyed talking with people of all ages and all walks of life, and always had something positive to say. She regularly reminded us, "If you can't say anything nice, don't say anything at all."

Franky preceded in death by her parents and by her brothers, Gerald Francisovich of Seaside, Ore., and Frank Francisovich Jr., of Spokane, Wash. She is survived by her son, James F. Cote, his wife, Margaret, and their children, Connor and Kelly; by her daughter, Christine Gress, her husband, David Gress, and his children, Gina and Andy (whom she called her "bonus grandchildren"); and by her sister-in-law, Janet Francisovich of Napa, Calif., whom she loved as a true sister.

At her direction, no funeral or celebration of life has been held. Donations in her memory may be made to the Mariners Elementary School Foundation or to the American Cancer Society.
