Boat parade part of Regatta

The Daily Astorian

The Astoria Regatta is holding its Highwater Boat Parade at 5:30 p.m. Aug. 8, sponsored by Englund Marine and Industrial Supply, starting at the West End Mooring Basin.

Award categories include: Queen’s Choice Overall, Best of Power, Best of Sail, Best of Classic and Best of Commercial.

There is no cost to participate, and boat owners can sign up at www.astoriaregatta.com. Participating captains get one day free mooring at the West Basin Marina.

On the record

Robbery

At 1:47 p.m. Friday, Warrenton Police arrested Rachel Lenore Schmitz, 29, transient, for third-degree robbery and third-degree theft after Schmitz attempted to shoplift shoes, valued at under $100, from Fred Meyer. When contacted by store staff, Schmitz reportedly resisted and started trying to fight them so the case turned into a robbery, according to police.

Sewage on Cannon Beach cleaned up

By DANI PALMER

The Cannon Beach Public Works Department posted signs to notify beach goers of a sewage spill on Monday.

CANNON BEACH — The city of Cannon Beach is waiting on the analysis of samples taken from a sewage spill early this week.

On Monday morning, a pump station near Gower Street quit for a couple of hours, spilling 11,000 gallons of sewage onto the beach in front of the Wayfarer Restaurant and Lounge, Public Works Director Dan Grassick said.

The intenal power supply to the computer system had quit working around 5:30 a.m. and alarms routed through that unit never went off. Grassick said a permitted emergency overflow pipe sent the spillage onto the beach instead of the middle of town. It is permitted by design by the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality.

It was when one of the city’s Public Works’ employees walked along the beach around 7:30 a.m. Monday that the spill was noticed. “We immediately responded,” Grassick said. “We removed about three inches of sand in the area. It (the sewage) didn’t go all the way out to the surf.”

The city took samples for testing from the affected area on Monday and Tuesday.

“It’s serious anytime you spill sewage,” Grassick said, but he added that it was a minor amount “relatively speaking.”

Grassick said the city expects test results back by Wednesday afternoon and that, hopefully by then, workers will be able to remove beach warning signs.

“I don’t think it’s a continued health hazard,” he said.

Pier 11 building named historic landmark

By DERRICK DePLEDGE
The Daily Astorian

The Pier 11 building is now a historic landmark.

Stephen and Karen Allen, who own the mall on the Columbia River at 11th Street, are making improvements but do not plan significant changes that could alter the character of the building.

The former warehouse, built around 1920, underwent remodeling in 1944 and 1976. While the exact lineage of Pier 11 is unclear, the Astoria Historic Landmarks Commission decided Tuesday night that the building is noteworthy enough to preserve.

The historic designation gives the owners some code flexibility when developing the building. But the status also means that proposed alterations must come back before the commission for approval, which in essence protects the property.

“This is a play to preserve property,” Commissioner Paul Caruana said.

The commission voted 3-1 in favor of the historic designation. Commissioner Jack Osterberg voted against the designation because city staff did not provide an evaluation of the criteria or recommendations and the owners did not offer enough detailed information about their plans.

Stephen Allen told the commission that the couple may add decking and storefronts along the Astoria Riverwalk to make the building more accessible.

“We don’t have any plans to change the building significantly,” he said.

The couple also owns Astoria Brewing Co., the Chart Room, Wet Dog Cafe and the former Josephson Fish Station. The city recognized the couple in June with an honorable mention award for historic preservation for the Astoria Brewing Co., which has been preserved as an example of the mid-century modern design of the 1960s.
