Ranch transformed from cult compound to Christian camp

By KATHY ANEY EO Media Group

ANTELOPE — Hannah Boozer inched her way along a narrow cable, her eyes worried, her jaw set.

The Pendleton teenager wore a harness and a lanyard that slid along an upper wire, so she knew she wouldn't fall far. Still, a dizzying 50 feet stood between the 18-year-old and terra firma.

Boozer, a camper at the world's largest Young Life facility near Antelope, was tackling the ropes course — a web of cables and ropes attached to utility poles set into a hilltop. The final station required a sixfoot horizontal leap to a trapeze bar before she would be gently lowered to the ground.

Had Boozer felt more relaxed, she might have taken a few moments to gaze at the scenery from her lofty position.

The view encompassed Young Life's Washington Family Ranch, a 64,000-acre Christian youth camp with a manmade lake, Olympic-size pool, three zip lines, go-kart track and an 88,000-square-foot sports center. About a mile away, in the middle school section, younger kids slid down tube slides at the camp's water park. Every week, about 1,100 new campers arrive at the ranch.

The oasis is surrounded by high desert flora and fauna. A gravel road leading to the camp slices through country rich with sage, juniper, greasewood and rimrock. The locals, many of them cattle ranchers, are rugged individuals who have weathered baking temperatures, middle-ofthe-night calvings and the biggest irritant of all — the Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh.

Spiritual leader

The Bhagwan, a spiritual leader from India, in 1981 established a commune on the land now occupied by the Young Life camp and what earlier was a large sheep and cattle concern called the Big Muddy Ranch. In the 1800s, a farmhouse still standing on the property served as a stagecoach stop.

The Bhagwan bought the remote property for $5.75 million and invested millions more to build Rajneeshpuram as a spiritual retreat for thousands of his red-frocked followers. In news clips from the 1980s, Raineeshees line the road for the Bhagwan's daily drive-by in a vehicle from his fleet of more than 90 Rolls Royce automobiles. Rancho Rajneesh, as some called it, had its own newspaper, fire department, night club and mall. The Rajneeshees clashed with locals over land use. The utopian desert commune collapsed after Rajneeshees were convicted of infecting four salad bars with salmonella in The Dalles, the Wasco County seat, in order to hamper voter turnout and swing an election. Other crimes included attempted mur-> center where kids scrambled up climbing walls and thudded basketballs off the hardwood. Once a place where thousands of Rajneeshees worshiped the Bhagwan, the center is a hub of recreational activity.

Kathy Aney/EO Media Group

The Washington Family Ranch in Central Oregon hosts about 1,100 campers every week. The Christian youth camp sits on the site of the former Rajneeshpuram.

He described the camp as a place where the gospel is presented, but not pushed. Seeds are planted during nightly meetings as kids sing and fellowship in a mosh pit-esque setting inside a building a short hop from the swimming pool. A pastor zings a short but pithy message.

Thatcher said much of the faith building happens one on one.

"We believe something real happens when you journey with a kid," he said.

If the camper isn't interested in faith?

"We meet people where they are — we don't force God on people," Thatcher said. "We provide space for every camper to respond to the good news. We don't stop journeying with kids if they don't choose him."

Camper Andrew Thomas, a recent Pendleton High School graduate, described the camp as engaging, non-threatening and "insane fun."

"The brochures say this will be the best week of your life and they're not lying," Thomas said.

"It is kind of like an escape from reality," said Makya Theis, of Pendleton, "It's a place where you know you are loved." ter source."

The lake went on hold until a crew digging the swimming pool hit a natural spring with a flow of — you guessed it — 10,000 gallons per day.

When planners couldn't decide what to do with the Bhagwan's house, a 1997 range fire decided matters. A finger of the fire raced down the ridge and torched the residence, the only one of 300 Rajneeshpuram buildings to burn.

The camp's huge grassy field, a place for soccer, volleyball and other activities, required several inches of sand to mitigate for muddiness. Someone on a four wheeler exploring the property discovered a huge sand deposit that provided the exact amount of sand needed.

"This place is a gift," Thatcher said.

Hannah Boozer, once she conquered the ropes course, said she thinks the setting is a perfect place for getting close to God.

"Young Life is a week full of eye-opening moments," she said. "God's grace definitely changes lives at Washington Family Ranch."

Terry Spivey/Wikimedia Commons Photo

Pandora moths return to forests

Associated Press

Pandora moth.

BEND — Pandora moths have taken flight again in the pine forests of Central Oregon.

Andy Eglitis, an entomologist for the Deschutes National Forest, has been getting calls about moth encounters in the woods and in Bend, The Bend Bulletin reported.

He believes there has been a resurgence in their population this summer, but it hasn't yet reached outbreak levels.

The last big outbreak was in the 1990s, when hundreds of moths crowded on buildings around Bend.

People who called Eglitis reported seeing about 50 moths each. The reports have come from various locations, including in the Deschutes National Forest near the Lava Cast Forest and at a bank building along U.S. Highway 20.

Pandora moths are easy to recognize because of their size and appearance.

At rest, the moths form about a 1 1/2-inch triangle, Eglitis said. In flight, they have a wingspan of about 3 inches. Those gray wings have jagged black lines on top and pink on the bottom. The females have thin yellow antennae. The males have feathery antennae of the same hue.

"They look like ferns," Eglitis said.

Native to Central Oregon, the pandora moth has a two-year life cycle dependent on pine trees. They munch the trees' needles like mad while they are caterpillars, but they do not cause deadly damage like gypsy moths and other invasive insects, Eglitis said.

Even during the 1990s outbreak, the moths did not dent Central Oregon's woods.

"It was really hard to find any trees that were killed by these things," he said.

The moths emerge from the ground and fly around this time in odd years. The caterpillars are out eating pine needles in spring and summer of even years.

What triggered the 1990s outbreak, which lasted about a decade and moved through different parts of Central Oregon, is unknown, said Stephen Fitzgerald, a forestry professor at Oregon State University in Corvallis. But scientists do know it was a virus that ended the outbreak around Bend and brought the number of moths back in check.

and has continued support with additional donations.

TITU LIFE'S

WASHINGTON

AMILY RANC

Kathy Aney/EO Media Group

Washington Family Ranch, near Antelope,

was once a huge sheep

ranch and later a spiritual retreat for followers of the Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh.

The Christian youth camp,

owned by Young Life,

der, arson, election fraud and wiretapping. About 10 followers were imprisoned. The Bhagwan was deported for immigration

Washington bought the seized property for a cool $3.65 million as a destination resort, but ran into zoning problems. The Washington family donated the property to Young Life in 1996

Montana billionaire Dennis opened in 1999.

violations.

The

Patty Read, administrative systems assistant at the Washington Family Ranch, said the camp is a mixture of new construction and remodeled Rajneeshpuram buildings. The hotels were repurposed into dorms. The nightclub and mall are now a residence for workers.

Ironic

The transformation to a Christian camp is nothing short of ironic, said Pendleton Young Life leader Chris Thatcher. He and three other leaders shepherded a contingent of 28 Pendleton teens all last week. Thatcher stood in the sports

Fascinating wrinkles

Read is one of 40 yearround employees at the ranch. She serves as camp tour guide along with her other duties. The camp's recent history includes some fascinating wrinkles. God, some say, sanded down some of the rough edges in the planning process.

Early on, Read said, planners discussed creating a manmade lake, but ran into a big problem.

"Consultants said the pond would evaporate about 10,000 gallons a day," she said. "They needed some kind of natural wa-

* * * * NOTICE * * * *

Attention: Oregon rural telephone customers who recently received a letter from their local telephone provider informing them of the need to select a new local long distance provider.

This selection is necessary because your current local long distance carrier, Qwest Corporation, d/b/a CenturyLink QC, located at 100 CenturyLink Drive, Monroe, LA 71203, is withdrawing as a provider of a local long distance services to customers of your local telephone company.* As noted in the letter, you have an opportunity to object to this service discontinuance at the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), but the letter contained an incomplete statement regarding the process for such objections. The correct statement reads as follows:

The FCC will normally authorize this proposed discontinuance of service (or reduction or impairment) unless it is shown that customers would be unable to receive service or a reasonable substitute from another carrier or that the public convenience and necessity is otherwise adversely affected. If you wish to object, you should file your comments as soon as possible, but no later than 15 days after the Commission releases public notice of the proposed discontinuance. You may file your comments electronically through the FCC's Electronic Comment Filing System using the docket number established in the Commission's public notice for this proceeding, or you may address them to the Federal Communications Commission, Wireline Competition Bureau, Competition Policy Division, Washington, DC 20554, and include in your comments a reference to the §63.71 Application of Qwest Corporation d/b/a CenturyLink QC. Comments should include specific information about the impact of this proposed discontinuance (or reduction or impairment) upon you or your company, including any inability to acquire reasonable substitute service.

* The local telephone companies are: Asotin Telephone Company, Beaver Creek Cooperative Tel. Co., Canby Telephone Association, Cascade Utilities, Inc., CenturyTel of Eastern Oregon, Inc., CenturyTel of Oregon, Inc., Clear Creek Mutual Telephone Co., Colton Telephone Company, Citizens Telecommunications Company of Oregon, Eagle Telephone System, Inc., Gervais Telephone Company, Helix Telephone Company, Home Telephone Company, Humboldt Telephone Company, Molalla Telephone Company, Monitor Cooperative Telephone Company, Monroe Telephone Company, Mt. Angel Telephone Company, Nehalem Telecommunications, Inc., North-State Telephone Company, Pine Telephone Corporation, Oregon-Idaho Utilities, Roome Telephone Company, Pine Telephone System, Inc., Pioneer Telephone Cooperative, Roome Telecommunications, Inc., Scio Mutual Telephone Association, St. Paul Cooperative Tele Assoc., Stayton Cooperative Telephone Company, Trans-Cascade Telephone Company

DUE TO HIGH FIRE DANGER

Effective immediately, the Lewis & Clark Timberlands

are closed to all public entry and will remain in effect until further notice.

For up-to-date information please call our RECREATIONAL HOTLINE 503-738-6351 Ext. 2

TIMBERLANDS CLOSED

"The entire office has become like family"

The entire office has become like family. Dr. Jeff explains everything. The dental staff are kind and experienced. I would highly recommend.

JOE Z.

JEFFREY M. LEINASSAR, DMD, FAGD

503/325-0310 1414 MARINE DRIVE, ASTORIA www.smileastoria.com