

Head Shed

503-325-6097
690 Olney, Astoria

Originally opened after the war as a restaurant that later changed to a spaghetti house. After the restaurant, the present location had a grocery store that was owned by Loyd Johnson and it burned down in about 1952. After the fire, a new building was constructed that housed the Pill Box Pharmacy until 1978. Present Head Shed owner Joan Hartley-Smith purchased the building and opened the hair-styling salon in 1979.

Joan Hartley-Smith and Karen Kreppel have worked together 7-1/2 years. Joan plans to eventually sell the building and work part-time with her clients by appointment only.

"This has been my whole life — I love the people and love the job."
