

Grant offered for crime victim services providers

The Daily Astorian

The Clatsop County Public Safety Coordinating Council is accepting proposals from providers of community-based services to crime victims.

The Oregon Criminal Justice Commission is offering two-year grants for local nonprofit victims services entities as part of its Justice Reinvestment Grant Program.

Providers offer services such as accessing safe emergency shelter, crisis counseling, court and medical accompaniment, safety planning and obtaining protective orders.

The grant totals $47,633 and is for an initial two years. Further funding is possible but is contingent on funding availability, demonstrated need and other factors.

For more information and instructions on submitting a proposal go to the "Jobs & Bids/RFPs" page of the Clatsop County website, www.co.clatsop.or.us.

Seaside volleyball camp this week

The Daily Astorian

The annual Seaside Volleyball Camp takes place this week at Seaside High School.

The camp will run from Wednesday to Friday, and is divided into two divisions: third through eighth graders (9-11:30 a.m. each day); ninth through 12th graders (3-6 p.m.). Registration starts 30 minutes prior to both sessions. Cost of camp is $50. Scholarships are available.

Watershed association parties on the dock

The Daily Astorian

The North Coast Watershed Association, a nonprofit partnership of four local watershed councils, is partnering with Buoy Beer to throw a "Dock Party" on the dock near their office, adjacent to Buoy Beer.

The free event is 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at 42 Seventh St. Buoy Beer donated the beer, which will be sold for $2 to raise money for the association. Pizza and non-alcoholic beverages will be provided.

Information about the organization and live music will be on tap.

Cannon Beach keeping an eye on water demand

City officials tap Ecola Creek early

By DANI PALMER

CANNON BEACH — The city of Cannon Beach is now dipping into Ecola Creek water supply — about a month ahead of schedule for the first time in 15 years.

The Public Works Department started the Ecola plant up in late July, drawing 100 gallons per minute to supplement water that comes from three mountain springs during the summer.

"In a normal year, we'd usually make it to Labor Day weekend," Public Works Director Dan Grassick said.

But it's been a dry summer, with .85 inches of rain in June and only .66 during July, well below the 1.51 inch average. There were 21 consecutive days without rain from the end of May into June and another 21 straight from the end of June through July, according to the National Weather Service.

Grassick said it became a struggle to keep the reservoirs full.

It was during the middle of June that demand began exceeding capacity. At first, it was just once a week, not much to worry about, Grassick said. The reservoirs could be filled back up over a couple of days.

But then two weeks passed and staff still hadn't been able to fill the reservoir fully.

Hot, dry weather

With the hot, dry weather forecast to continue, Grassick said it became important to keep the reservoirs full for safety reasons, in case of a fire.

Demand is higher on the weekends, too, when more tourists are in town, especially in late July and early August.

Grassick said the bulk of the demand has been irrigation, which started a month sooner than usual with the dry weather.

Dan Grassick

July water demand increased significantly year over year, by about 20 percent, he noted. "The normal trend has been around 6 to 7 percent per year for this month," Grassick wrote in his monthly report to the City Council.

Ecola Creek Watershed Council member Jan Siebert-Wahrmund asked the city about scaling back on irrigation to save water during a Parks and Community Services meeting in July.

"I'm very prepared to stop irrigating if asked," public works employee Kirk Anderson replied.

Not in 'dire straits'

There have been talks of implementing a water conservation plan, but Grassick said that likely won't be necessary. He added the city would seriously consider one if Cannon Beach reached 50 percent of what it can take from Ecola Creek.

The city has a water right of 1 cubic foot per second from the creek, which has a flow rate of nearly 10 cubic feet per second. Grassick said that 1 cubic foot covers the entire city, so reaching that high of a demand is not an issue they expect to encounter.

"We're not in extremely dire straits yet," he added.

But if it does come to a water conservation plan, irrigation would be a primary target. Business owners and residents would be asked to decrease their usage.
