Taylor Mickle, center, will be one of the players helping conduct Astoria's basketball skills clinic this month.

Astoria basketball clinics begin Saturday

The Daily Astorian

A basketball clinic for two different age groups will take place at Astoria High School on three separate dates in November. The first camp is scheduled for Saturday. Students in the first through fourth grades can register at 9:30 a.m., and the camp runs from 10-11:30 a.m. Registration for fifth-through eighth-grade students is at 11:30 a.m., and the camp runs from noon to 2 p.m.

Times are the same for camps Nov. 14 and Nov. 21. Cost of the camp is $30 for all three sessions. All proceeds go to Astoria girls basketball. A T-shirt will be included. The camp is put on by Astoria High School student Taylor

Mickle for her senior project. Astoria's coaching staff, along with current and former Astoria players, will be conducting the camp. Registrations are available at Astoria schools, or students can register at the door on the day of the camp.

Loggers' Landwehr gets all-league honor

The Daily Astorian

Knappa junior Kaitlyn Landwehr was selected to the second team of the Northwest All-League volleyball team, announced at last week's league tournament.

Landwehr was joined by senior teammate Bailey Corder, who was named honorable mention.

Faith Bible had two players on the first team and one on the second team, all seniors, including league Player of the Year Maile Kam. Faith Bible's Jackie Arnold was named Coach of the Year.

Kansas City throws a Royals party today

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Kansas City Royals and their fans will throw one of the biggest parties in the city's history to celebrate the team's first World Series championship in 30 years.

The Royals became World Series champions Sunday with a 7-2 victory in 12 innings over the New York Mets. It was the first championship for the Royals since 1985, which was followed by decades of losing baseball that caused many in the city to abandon the team.

City officials said they expect at least 200,000 people to pack into the 2.3-mile parade route Tuesday through downtown Kansas City to cheer as the players, coaches and team officials drive by in a motorcade before a rally at Union Station.

Seattle knew it had to get to .500 by bye week

By TIM BOOTH
AP Sports Writer

RENTON, Wash. — While their concern remained with teammate Ricardo Lockette undergoing neck surgery, the Seattle Seahawks scattered for their bye week on Monday understanding the importance of getting back to .500 at the midpoint of the season.

That might not be considered much of an accomplishment after beating Dallas 13-12 that evened Seattle's record at 4-4. Even coach Pete Carroll made a crack about it on Monday saying it was "nothing to be shouting about." But getting to that mark before taking a needed break leaves many of Seattle's goals from before the season in its own control heading into the final eight games. That includes remaining the dominant team in the NFC West as Seattle has two games remaining against division-leading Arizona and one game with second-place St. Louis.

"We have a second-half to really go for it. We have all of the matchups and the games we need to play in the division to settle issues and to go for it and take it as far as we can,"

Carroll said. "We've put back-to-back weeks winning on the road which is enormous and we're grateful for those wins and doing things in a fashion that we're different than we were earlier in the year. We're finishing games well on both sides of the ball and starting to play in the style that we're accustomed to."

Seattle's escape from Dallas was thanks to a defense that for a second straight week didn't allow a touchdown and was suffocating in the fourth quarter. After defensive breakdowns in the fourth quarter were partly to blame for ear-
