Standards set for hiring new county manager

By KYLE SPURR
The Daily Astorian

The Clatsop County Board of Commissioners approved standards and criteria Monday for hiring a new county manager to replace Scott Somers, who resigned in September for a new position in Maryland.

The agreed upon criteria lists minimum requirements for applicants in education, experience, expertise and abilities. It also lists the procedure commissioners will follow to recruit and hire for the position.

For education, commissioners agreed applicants need a bachelor's degree in local government disciplines or a related field from an accredited university or college. A graduate degree in business or public administration is highly desirable, according to the county.

An applicant would need seven or more years of experience with public or private work. Experience in Oregon land use laws would be a plus, the county said.

Commissioners will select and hire the county manager.

The new manager will likely earn a similar amount to Somers, who was paid $137,000 a year.

Former Cannon Beach City Manager Rich Mays is serving as interim county manager.

Coast Guard rescues three kayakers from river

The Daily Astorian

The U.S. Coast Guard rescued three capsized kayakers near Clatsop Spit at the Columbia River entrance Tuesday afternoon.

All were delivered to awaiting emergency medical services.

An MH-60 Jayhawk helicopter crew spotted the distressed kayakers about 1:55 p.m. Tuesday while conducting advanced helicopter rescue training near the entrance to the Columbia River. An MH-65 Dolphin helicopter crew from Air Station Port Angeles, Washington, was also participating and spotted a female kayaker in the vicinity of Buoy 10.

The Jayhawk rescued two male kayakers and transported them to emergency personnel at the Astoria Regional Airport. A 47-foot motor lifeboat from Station Cape Disappointment in Ilwaco, Washington, with the help of the Dolphin helicopter, rescued the female kayaker, transporting her to waiting emergency personnel back at the station.

"Regardless of how nice it looks out, always check marine weather reports before you hit the water, especially right now as various small craft advisories and gale warnings are in effect all across Oregon and Washington," said Lt. Adriana Gaenzle, operations controller at Coast Guard Sector Columbia River. "Outstanding work on behalf of the crews for spotting and quickly addressing what could have easily become a disastrous situation."

Seas were 8 to 10 feet, along with 10-mph winds and an air and water temperature of 56 degrees.

OBITUARIES

Laurie Landwehr

Eugene

Dec. 13, 1945 — Oct. 30, 2015

Laurie Landwehr passed away unexpectedly Oct. 30, 2015. She was born Dec. 13, 1945, in Kallispell, Montana, to Rosmond and Clarence Bruns. Shortly thereafter her mother moved Laurie, her brother David, and sister Christine to Klamath Falls, Oregon, living with her grandmother, Dora Goddard. In 1951, her mother married Harvey Brannan.

Laurie grew up in Klamath Falls, where she graduated from Klamath Union High School in 1964.

Laurie married Richard Landwehr in 1965 and started a family, having two children, Kevin and Lisa. The family moved to Milwaukie, Oregon, later moving to Astoria, Oregon, where she raised Kevin and Lisa until they graduated from high school.

Laurie then relocated to Portland, following her divorce, and went to work for Northwest Natural Gas Co. She relocated again to Medford, where she worked for Avista Corporation until her retirement in 2013, after which she moved to Eugene, where she lived at the time of her death.

More than anything, Laurie loved her family and friends, and we all loved her infectious laughter. With her laughter she would always light up a room, engaging everyone she came in contact with and sadly, with her passing, our rooms are a little dimmer. But make no mistake, in the words of her grand-nephew Hendrix, "She lives in your heart, I'm warning you, she lives in your heart!"

Laurie was preceded in death by her daughter, Lisa. Laurie is survived by her son, Kevin, grandchildren Brendan, Taylor, and Madison of Astoria, Oregon, David Bruns of Beaverton, Oregon, Christine Bruns Morgan, of Sacramento, California, Patty Jo Brannan of Eugene, Oregon, and Louis Brannan, of Vancouver, Washington, as well as numerous nieces, nephews, cousins, and close friends.
