

Trail's End offers web strategies workshop for artists, writers

GEARHART — Learn to make the web work for you. Trail's End Art Association will offer the workshop Web Strategies for Artists and Writers from 1 to 4 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 25. The workshop will take place at Trail's End, located at 656 A St.

The Internet offers incredible resources for building an audience and promoting your work. Without spending loads of time and money, you'd love to tap into those that best fit your skills and purposes. But with so many options — and so much confusing tech-speak — it's hard to know where to start.

In this three-hour workshop, instructor Deb Vanasse will cover websites and electronic newsletters, two foundational strategies for every artist and writer. Whether you're starting from scratch or looking to refresh your web presence, you'll leave with information, ideas and a plan of action.

This is a workshop for participants with tech skills from beginner to intermediate. Participants should be able to find websites and use email.

Cost is $30 for TEAA members and $35 for nonmembers. Fifteen percent of proceeds supports TEAA. The workshop is for eight to 15 participants.

Co-founder of the literary arts nonprofit 49 Writers and founder of the independent authors cooperative Running Fox Books, Vanasse has authored 17 books. Among the most recent are "Write Your Best Book," a practical guide to writing books that rise above the rest; "Cold Spell," a novel that captures the strain of self-doubt and complicated family bonds; and the deeply researched and richly imagined biography "Wealth Woman." After 36 years in Alaska, Vanasse now lives on the North Coast of Oregon. To learn more, visit www.debvanasse.com

ASTORIA — Northwest roots rock band Cedar teeth will perform at 8 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 21 at the Fort George Brewery, located at 1483 Duane St. There is no cover, and all ages are welcome.

Cedar Teeth is a five-piece band hailing from the Cascade foothills of Colton. For many years, the fellas have been working together in a shed at the edge of an ancient forest.

The songs of Cedar Teeth come together organically: like a jigsaw puzzle without the box, assembled by many hands. Crafting a sound that blends rough and rustic folk rock with lyrical American roots, the music of Cedar Teeth is drawn from their experiences and sentiments of living on the frontier dividing the wilderness and the city. Their debut album "Hoot" explores the tensions of a generation: love, materialism and destruction in a morally ambivalent landscape.

Rayson Gordon's driving and melodic bass lines are the steady pulse at the heart of Cedar Teeth. Founder and creative contrarian, Gordon is also the artistic voice of the band and its illustrator.

Self-taught guitarist Luke Precourt channels an idiosyncratic, genre-defying sound; whether arcane or archaic, his distinct leads remain tethered to the ether. A life-long searcher, dreamer and pioneer, Precourt's musical meditations weave through Cedar Teeth's roots and boughs.

Primary vocalist and acoustic guitarist Dylan Martell is the visceral yet vulnerable voice of Cedar Teeth. Martell's lyrics, composed of stark and paradoxical imagery, are the lens through which the music is focused.

Incendiary behind the drums, but uniquely serene with banjo in hand, Aaron Troxel also supplies haunting gospel-tinged harmonies and lead vocals. An astute critic and interpreter, Troxel focuses each member's eclectic palette into a single sonic vision.

Adam Murray, whether on guitar, keyboard, vocals or drums, is the rug that ties the room together. Murray is the spirited guide and irreverent translator, endearing the audience to the band.
