The Daily Astorian

Equestrian riders from Astoria and Knappa High Schools (technically two teams) paired up to compete in an Oregon High School Equestrian Team event, Feb. 10-14 in McMinnville.

It was the first event of the season for the two teams, who practice, travel and compete together.

Fishermen and Loggers on horseback competed in nine different events in McMinnville, with a fair amount of success.

Astoria's Barry James had a time of 8.607 seconds in Steer Daubing, good enough for fifth place in that event.

Ellie Smith of Knappa had a time of 15.768 in Barrels, placing sixth; and Smith took seventh in Pole Bending with a time of 23.901.

"It's five days and four nights of hotel rooms, horses, competition, no sleep, tears, laughter and memories made," said Brittany Israel, the Astoria coach.

"All the girls get along and have competed off and on with their horses through the years. I am very lucky to have these ath-

Arch Cape: The review 'stopped me dead in my tracks'

Gardner said the decision "lacked transparency" and it was a mistake to dissolve an organization that gave residents and property owners a voice in Arch Cape land use issues.

"I'm extremely disappointed that staff made a recommendation and commissioners made a decision with virtually no effort to find out what folks in Arch Cape thought," former committee member Daniel Seifer said. "Design review has always been the community vehicle to participate in development and land use planning. The process makes for better neighbors and a better community."

Other Arch Cape residents defended the county's decision, which was based on claims the committee was costly, was not useful and limited to a small geographic area.

Marty Francis, of the Marty Francis Group in Portland, spent a year "dealing with" the Arch Cape Design Review Committee while trying to build and sell a residential beach house in Arch Cape, which he sold last fall.

"I was amazed that the county was not in line with what the folks were doing in Arch Cape," Francis said. "I was approved by the state and county. Then all of a sudden, Arch Cape design review stopped me dead in my tracks."

Although he described Clatsop County as "great," Francis said it was frustrating to get "chewed out" by the Arch Cape committee.

"I was surprised by how vehemently opposed they were to any development in any wetland," Francis said. "Frankly, they put me through hell."

Committee members 'disappointed'

A reason given for disbanding the committee was its "hostile" attitude toward a staff member with a disability. Committee members said they were being portrayed in a "false light," and comments were taken out of context.

"It's tragic that the staff and commission used one incident as an excuse to eliminate something with that legacy," Gardner said. "It's a real slap in the face to people who have given much of their time and heart to the county and community."

Although the disability-related issue played a role in the decision to disband the committee, other concerns drove the decision, interim County Manager Rich Mays said. According to Mays, commissioners were responding to complaints of a "two-step" review process and building delays as a result of the advisory committee's oversight.

Neighborhood association to replace committee

While county commissioners dissolved the Arch Cape Design Review Committee, they agreed to formally recognize a neighborhood association in Arch Cape. The association could provide input on land use projects, but would lack legal authority.

Gardner, Lundy and Seifer said the neighborhood associations would be a far cry from the role played by the former committee, and Arch Cape would no longer have an official role in land use planning.

Moving forward, Lundy said that neighborhood associations are "an opportunity," but ultimately they have "no teeth."

County Commissioner Lianne Thompson, who represents Arch Cape and joined other commissioners in voting to dissolve the committee, said Arch Cape residents were almost evenly divided on the committee.

Thompson said she attempted to delay the commission's vote and give neighbors time to be heard, but was unsuccessful.

"People lost something that mattered to them," Thompson said. "I understand people are disappointed and there's a loss of something precious. They put their heart and soul in it."

Thompson said she is optimistic about a "fresh start."

"Neighborhood associations are a way to maintain positive relationships and resolve differences," she said. "It was a wonderful tradition, but it's time to evolve. I hope it's going to be better."
