

'I Will Survive,' dirty words routine added to US registry

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Gloria Gaynor disco anthem, George Carlin's seven dirty words routine and coverage of Wilt Chamberlain's 100-point game are among 25 sound recordings that have been selected for preservation at the Library of Congress.

The recordings reaching back to 1911 are being added Wednesday to the library's National Recording Registry. Each year the library chooses recordings that are "culturally, historically or aesthetically significant" and are at least 10 years old. This year's picks include a wide range of music from blues, jazz and rock to country and classical, but there are also recordings of radio shows, sports and comedy.

"'I Will Survive' is my mantra, the core of my God-given purpose," Gaynor said of her 1978 hit being chosen in a statement provided by the library. "It is my privilege and honor to use it to inspire people around the world of every nationality, race, creed, color and age group to join me as I sing and live the words: 'I Will Survive.'"

Congressional act

The Library of Congress has been seeking to preserve important sound recordings under terms of a preservation act passed by Congress. This year's selections bring the registry's total to 450. Nominations come through online submissions from the public and from the registry's board.

The list includes other musical favorites such as Billy Joel's "Piano Man," the Supremes' "Where Did Our Love Go," Merle Haggard's "Mama Tried," Metallica's "Master of Puppets" album, John Coltrane's "A Love Supreme" and Clifton Chenier's zydeco album "Bogalusa Boogie." The list includes two Wilt Chamberlain of the Philadelphia Warriors holds a sign reading "100" in the dressing room on March 2, 1962, in Hershey, Pa., after he scored 100 points as the Warriors defeated the New York Knickerbockers 169-147. Recordings reaching back to 1911, including coverage of the game, are being added to the Library of Congress' National Recording Registry. Each year the library chooses recordings that are "culturally, historically or aesthetically significant." This year's picks include a wide range of music from blues, jazz and rock to country and classical, but there are also recordings of radio shows, speeches, comedy and the recording of the coverage of the fourth quarter of the game that Chamberlain scored a record-shattering 100 points in a single game.

recordings of "Mack the Knife." One was recorded by Louis Armstrong with his quintet in 1956 and the other by Bobby Darin with a big band arrangement in 1959.

The registry already includes recordings by Latino artists, but Santana's "Abraxas" album, which blended Latino music with other styles, is probably the first on the list that introduced the public on a mass scale to Latino artists and themed recordings, said Steve Leggett, program coordinator with the National Recording Preservation Board.

"It had a huge commercial and artistic impact," he said.

Some of the earliest recordings include a 1911 recording of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" by the Columbia Quartette, also known as the Peerless Quartet, and Clarence Williams' Blue Five's 1923 recording of "Wild Cat Blues," which is among the earliest jazz recordings to have widespread influence on musicians.

More than music

But the registry includes more than just music. One of the recordings the public submissions brought to light is the long-running daytime serial radio program "Vic and Sade," Leggett said. The registry includes the June 4, 1937, episode "Decoration Day."

The list also includes two episodes of "Destination Freedom," a radio program broadcast from 1948 to 1950 on Chicago's WMAQ. The program presented accomplishments of black Americans and the prejudices they faced and gave lead roles to black actors, which was unusual at the time.

"These highlight the importance of radio," Leggett said. "It's still a medium that people get their music and information from."

The historic recordings include George C. Marshall's June 1947 "Marshall Plan" speech outlining the plan to restore Europe after World War II. There's also a recording of the coverage of the fourth quarter of the March 2, 1962, game between the Philadelphia Warriors and the New York Knicks in which Wilt Chamberlain scored a record-shattering 100 points in a single game.

Many of the filthy words discussed in "Seven Words You Can Never Say On Television" from Carlin's 1972 stand-up comedy album "Class Clown" still probably can't be aired.

"Let's face it, if this had happened today, it wouldn't have caused such controversy," Leggett said. "It definitely made an impact."

Dealership: Gouge said maintenance at Astoria location has been a challenge on West Marine Drive from Ray and Ruth Birdwell. "It's pretty much like owning your own home."

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers issued a wetland fill permit in September for Gouge's new location, and groundwork started in November. Gouge said crews, under general contractor Rickenbach Construction, hope to pour foundation later this week and erect the main building in July or August.

Gouge has said the maintenance at his Astoria location is a challenge, and that the new location will improve the customer experience with a state-of-the-art facility.

Joining the migration

Astoria Ford is the last major car dealership to leave the city. Ocean Crest Chevrolet (2004) and Lum's Auto Center (2008) left their old spaces in Astoria and built new in Warrenton, which is also home to a Kia dealership.

Gouge, originally from Port Angeles, Washington, moved to Astoria from Centralia to work at Birdwell Motors in 1997. In 1999, Birdwell Motors was acquired by Boyland Auto Group, owned by former professional baseball player Dorian Boyland.

"Dorian pretty much took me under his wing and helped me obtain the store," said Gouge, who bought Astoria Ford in the early 2000s.

Over the years, he has gone from having the best to the worst facility for an auto dealership, Gouge said, as other dealers have left their old locations to build new in Warrenton. The former Ocean Crest Chevrolet in Astoria is now Fort George Brewery's Lovell Room, and the former Lum's Auto Center is on a city block with interest from developers wanting to build apartments.

Up for sale

The Birdwells have Gouge's current location, including 668, 710 and 750 W. Marine Drive, up for sale at $3.5 million, including 40 acres of mostly submerged land on Youngs Bay, 3.64 acres of buildable land and more than 30,000 square feet of building space between the showroom and a larger, vacant building next door.

Dane Gouge bought Astoria Ford at 710 W. Marine Drive in the early 2000s.
