SEASIDE — A new chief executive and four doctors are joining Providence Seaside Hospital.

The hospital's chief executive, Kendall Sawa, who began work at the hospital in January, introduced the four new doctors during a reception Wednesday.

Sawa came to Providence Seaside from Ocean Beach Hospital, in Ilwaco, Washington, where he was chief executive since 2012.

He formerly served as vice president for patient care services at PeaceHealth Ketchikan Medical Center, before taking the helm of Ocean Beach Hospital under a management agreement between the public hospital district and PeaceHealth to manage daily operations. The agreement expired at the end of last year.

Sawa said the newly hired doctors added to the specialty services at Providence Seaside. He acknowledged the need for more primary care doctors but added that hospitals throughout the U.S. are challenged to find primary doctors and it is even more difficult for rural hospitals, such as Providence Seaside.

"We have several strategies," said Sawa. "A lot of it is by word-of-mouth. They come to the community and see how great it is."

All of the new specialists will work full time at Providence Seaside and will live in the area, Sawa said. "Some have even bought houses," he added.

The new specialists are:
• Brook Benze, orthopedic surgery: Benze is board certified in orthopedic surgery with a subspecialty in sports medicine. He received his medical degree from Oregon Health & Science University and completed an internship at Maricopa County Medical Center in Phoenix. He has been a visiting surgeon with Providence Seaside for more than 20 years. His expertise is replacing knee, hip and shoulder joints.

• Christopher Nyte, otolaryngology: Nyte specializes in treatment of disorders of the ears, nose and throat and facial plastic surgery. His interests include skin cancer, nasal obstruction and therapeutic use of Botox for migraines. He received his medical degree at the A.T. Still University School of Osteopathic Medicine in Missouri.

• Laura Gordon, urology: Gordon earned her medical degree from Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago. She interned in surgery and completed a residency in urology at the University of California, Los Angeles. She provides surgical and nonsurgical care for conditions involving the urinary tract.

• Dale J. Veith, psychology: Veith received his degree from Pacific University School of Professional Psychology and also completed a residency there. He has been a psychologist for 19 years.
