Everyone lies, but politicians do it more often

Research indicates we learn to lie at about 3 years old

By SETH BORENSTEIN AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — This is the season of lies.

We watch with fascination as candidates for the world's most powerful job trade falsehoods and allegations of dishonesty.

presidential Republican candidate Donald Trump routinely calls rival Ted Cruz "Lyin' Ted." Cruz retorts: "Falsely accusing someone of lying is itself a lie and something Donald does daily."

News organizations such as The Associated Press and PolitiFact dedicate enormous resources to separating candidates' truthful wheat from their dishonest chaff.

But if we've come to expect office-seekers who seem truth-averse, many of us have given little thought to our own fibs, and how they

Paul Zheng/University of Toronto A child peeks at a hidden card when an adult leaves the room and later lies about not peeking, during a study about how young children start to lie at Kang Lee at the University of Toronto in Toronto. Scientists say we all lie, and this year, politicians are bending the truth big time, with real consequences. By studying how and why we deceive, the experts say they can help us better understand the 2016 election season.

For more than two decades, researchers of different stripes have examined humanity's less-than-truthful underbelly, and this is what they have found: We all stretch the truth. We learned to deceive as toddlers. We rationalize our fabrications that benefit us. We tell little white lies daily that make others feel good.

"I feel more worried about lying in public life (specifically by politicians, and in particular, Trump) than I ever have before," psychology researcher Bella DePaulo at the University of California, Santa Barbara, said in an email. When lies succeed, they make it "more tempting to lie. Lies can stick. They can have a lingering effect, even if they are debunked."

Early learners

Children learn to lie at an average of about 3 years old, often when they realize that other people don't know what they are thinking, said Kang Lee, a professor at the University of Toronto.

He has done extensive research on children and lying. Lee set up an experiment in a video monitored room to see if he could catch children lying about peeking at a toy when an adult left the room.

At age 2, only 30 percent lie, Lee said. At age 3, half do. By 5 or 6, 90 percent of the kids lie and Lee said he worries about the 10 percent who don't. This is universal, Lee

In 1996, DePaulo, author of "The Hows and Whys of Lies," put recorders on students for a week and found they lied, on average, in every third conversation of 10 minutes or more. For adults, it was once every five conversations.

"I would say we're lying constantly. Constantly," said Maurice Schweitzer, who studies deception and decision-making at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton alma mater.

White lies

Experts split on whether to count white lies, the social lubrication that makes civilization operate. When your spouse tells you that you don't look fat in that outfit when you do, does it really do any harm?

Some lies, said Schweitzer, "fall under politeness norms and are not very harmful. There are other lies that are self-interested and those are the ones that are really harmful. Those are the ones that harm relationships, harm trust.'

But DePaolo sees no distinction: "It doesn't matter if the attempt was motivated by good intentions and it doesn't matter if the lie is about something little.'

Regardless, society rewards people for white lies, said Robert Feldman at the University of Massachusetts. "We don't like people who tell us the truth all the time.

He added, "The lies that we accept from politicians right now are lies that are seen as acceptable because it's what we want to hear," like a spouse

School of Business, Trump's saying that an outfit flatters

Or perhaps we feel that lying is necessary. "The reason that people want their politicians to lie them is that people care about politics," said Dan Ariely, a professor of psychology and behavioral economics at Duke University. "You understand that Washington is a dirty place and that lying is actually very helpful to get your policies implemented."

When people deceive beyond white lies, they spend a lot of effort justifying and rationalizing what they are

Likely to deceive

"Dishonesty is contagious," said University of Nottingham's Simon Gaechter.

His March 2016 study examined honesty in a dice game in 23 different countries (but not the United States) and then compared them to a corruption index for those countries. The more corrupt a society was, the more likely the people there were willing to deceive in the simple dice game.

If you smell ROTTEN EGGS it could be a gas leak. And the best thing to do is leave your home and call NW Natural. We'll be out to make sure everything is safe. Unsure of what to do? Just take a look at our tips to the right.

How to identify a possible gas leak.

If you smell a rotten egg or sulfur odor, you hear a blowing or hissing sound, or you see blowing dirt, it could be a gas leak.

What to do.

Leave your home and the area immediately. Don't use any electrical device such as a light switch, telephone, appliance or garage door opener. And don't try to find the leak yourself.

Who to call.

Go outside and use your cell phone, or a neighbor's phone, and call NW Natural at 800-882-3377.
