Scholarship winners treat public to concert

The Daily Astorian

The scholarship recipients of the Friday Musical Club are featured in concert at 3 p.m. Sunday at the First Lutheran Church in Astoria. The performers were selected last fall from the applications submitted to the club's scholarship committee, and have been taking private lessons with selected instructors since November.

Scholarship recipients and their teachers include: Fiona Bonn of Cannon Beach, studying clarinet with John Hammond; Andrew Conrad of Astoria, studying cello with Judy Woodward; Charity Fleck of Ilwaco, Washington, studying voice with Barbara Poulshock; Julie Foss of Astoria, studying violin with Angela Calvin-Pederson; J.J. Heacock of Warrenton, studying trombone with Bryce Pel-tier; Adam Morse of Cannon Beach, studying voice with Dr. Susan Buehler; Nicole Ramsdell of Astoria, studying oboe with Kelly Larkins; and Megan Schächer from Astoria, studying flute with Shelley Loring.

The scholarship program funds the cost of private lessons for recipients, and is supported by club dues, donations from club and community members, and the Patricia Friedland Fund of the Oregon Community Foundation, and is affiliated with Astoria High School Scholarships Inc., to which donations are tax deductible.

A reception for the performers follows the concert, with refreshments provided by club members, and the public is invited to hear and enjoy these young musicians. There is no admission charge; however, a donation basket will be available for those wishing to contribute to the scholarship fund.

Students from Clatsop and Pacific counties in grades 8-12, as well as Clatsop Community College students to age 21 may apply. To apply to the scholarship program for this fall, contact Susan Buehler, committee chairwoman at vsbuehler@gmail.com, or call 503-436-0378. Information will also be available at area-wide schools at the beginning of the fall term.

CCC students present papers at philosophy conference

The Daily Astorian

Two students at Clatsop Community College, Alec Chapa and Georges Oates Larson, presented philosophy papers at the Pacific University Undergraduate Philosophy Conference, which took place April 15 and 16. The conference is one of the largest undergraduate philosophy conferences in the country. Ninety-eight papers were presented, and students from 30 states and five different countries participated.

Chapa's essay, "Beyond Marxist Revolution: A New Consciousness," compares the philosophies of Karl Marx and M.K. Gandhi to investigate the role of violence and nonviolence in political revolutions.

Larson's paper, "Eternal Recurrence and the Identity of Indiscernibles," looks at Friedrich Nietzsche's idea of eternal recurrence, and then investigates what identity might mean in such a situation, using the work of mathematician philosopher Max Black.

Chapa and Larson were the only community college students presenting papers, according to Seth Tichenor, CCC philosophy, religion and politics instructor. "It's quite an honor for them to get to present at this conference," he added. "I was very proud of them. They went toe to toe, philosophical speaking, with some very gifted undergrads from all over the country, and the world."
