

Oregon officials replacing signs warning of road curves

Associated Press

BEND — Oregon transportation officials plan to increase the recommended speed on signs advising drivers to slow down while approaching a curve.

The Bulletin reported that state Department of Transportation spokesman Tom Fuller says officials will change 50 to 75 percent of the signs on state-managed roads, mostly by bumping up the recommended speed by 5 or 10 mph.

According to Fuller, many of the recommended speeds date back to the 1930s or 1940s, when road managers often took a more conservative approach. The department will be using modern equipment to set the new recommendations.

Fuller says the change is part of a federal push to make such signs more consistent across the country.

ODOT officials say many signs along highways in central and Eastern Oregon have already been replaced.

Hunters up reward in bighorn poaching

The Daily Astorian

Chapters of the Oregon Hunters Association, including the local Clatsop County chapter, have pooled resources to increase the reward to up to $8,300 for information leading to whoever poached a bighorn ram out of season in early April off Interstate 84.

The previous reward consisted of a standard $500 from the Turn In Poachers reward fund and $1,000 from the Oregon Chapter of the Foundation for North American Wild Sheep.

This latest illegal bighorn killing was the third in the area this spring.

"This bighorn case has riled up hunters across the state, as this is an iconic species that was once extirpated from Oregon by settlers," Jim Akenson, the conservation director for the hunters association, said in a statement. "Sportsmen helped bring bighorns back, and sportsmen shepherd this flock vigilantly."

The association's Clatsop County chapter contributed $500 to the higher reward.

The Oregon State Police is requesting anyone with information on this incident to contact Senior Trooper Jubitiz at 541-705-5330 or the TIP hotline at 800-452-7888. A caller may remain anonymous and still collect the reward.
