Estuary conference tackles 'The Blob' at the Liberty

ASTORIA — The Columbia River Estuary Conference will address "The Blob" and Climate Change May 24-26 at the Liberty Theater.

Regional scientists will present new findings on species recovery, restoration, research, and monitoring from the Lower Columbia River and estuary.

This year, the conference will focus specifically on climate change, the warm blob off the Pacific Coast, and other recent anomalous conditions, and their effects on ecosystems of the lower river, plume and nearshore ocean.

The estuary conference is an excellent opportunity to meet researchers and natural resource managers working in the Lower Columbia River area and hear results from research and species recovery efforts.

Sessions run from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. each day, and there is also a poster session during an evening social on Tuesday, May 24.

The biennial conference, the ninth since 1999, is sponsored by Bonneville Power Administration, Columbia River Estuary Study Taskforce, Northwest Power and Conservation Council, Lower Columbia Estuary Partnership, National Park Service, Lower Columbia Fish Recovery Board, Society of Wetland Scientists Pacific Northwest Chapter, Oregon Department of Land Conservation and Development and Liberty Theater.

The Columbia River Estuary Conference registration is $125 for all three days of the conference, or $70 for a single conference day. To register, visit <http://bit.ly/1T2CSxi>
