Bulk carrier that ran aground cleared for sea

The Daily Astorian

The U.S. Coast Guard has allowed the Sparna, a bulk grain carrier that ran aground in March near Cathlamet, Washington, to hit the high seas. The order was made by Capt. Daniel Travers, captain of the port and commander of Sector Columbia River.

“We have inspected the Sparna and have approved the temporary repairs to make the vessel seaworthy,” said Lt. Cmdr. Ben Russell, chief of the inspections department for the Coast Guard’s Marine Safety Unit in Portland. “Our inspection team has monitored the planning and implementation of the repairs over the last two months. We are comfortable with the outcome and wish the crew of the Sparna a safe voyage across the Pacific Ocean.” After the ship grounded, it was towed to Kalama, Washington, and detained for temporary repairs. The boulder that was lodged inside the hull of the vessel during the grounding was encased in steel and concrete and is still aboard the Sparna.

Young drowning victim identified

LONG BEACH, Wash. — Authorities have identified Daniela Garcia, a 12-year-old Warrenton girl, as the victim of a fatal drowning Sunday near Klipsan Beach. Pacific County Sheriff’s Office Chief Criminal Deputy Pat Matlock said Monday that the investigation had revealed new details of the incident. Responders now believe the girl was staying with a caregiver in the area of the Tides West subdivision. The female caregiver told police that she gave Garcia permission to play on the beach, a little before 7 p.m. Garcia was wearing her street clothes, so it is unlikely that the caregiver thought she was planning to swim. According to Matlock, the girl was only out of the caregiver’s sight for a very brief time. “Ten or 15 minutes later, she went to look for Daniela, and she was nowhere to be found. Then she contacted a neighbor and had them call 911,” Matlock said. Investigators still aren’t sure how the girl got swept out into deep water, but say she may have been wading or playing near the water’s edge. Garcia is one of numerous young people who have drowned at peninsula beaches. Most recently, 10-year-old Lindsey Mustread died after being swept into deep water by a powerful undercurrent in July 2014. Mustread’s younger brother and cousin narrowly survived the incident.

City Council, Library Board mull future

The Daily Astorian

The future of the Astoria Public Library will be the topic of an open house and a special meeting Wednesday of the Astoria City Council and Astoria Library Board. The open house will be held at the library from 4:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Hacker Architects, the city’s library consultant, will make a presentation on the options for a new or renovated library. The City Council and Library Board will discuss the options at a special meeting at City Hall at 7 p.m. The city is looking at a new library and housing project at Heritage Square or a renovated library at 10th Street that could expand into the library’s basement, parking lot or the vacant Waldorf Hotel next door.

Donation: ‘They did so much for us. I think $5,000 is a drop in the bucket’

“The resources that the Oregon Fallen Badge Foundation provided to Seaside on such short notice, and to the extent that they did, can only be described by me as amazing,” the police chief wrote. Ham suggested a donation of $5,000 or more to the foundation, an amount “not enough to properly express our gratitude for the support they have given to our community, but any donation amount will send the message that they are appreciated and we thank them for their service.” Goodding, 39, died after being shot serving a warrant on convicted felon Phillip Max Ferry on Broadway in downtown Seaside. In the aftermath, the Oregon Fallen Badge Foundation partnered with the Seaside Police Department to provide backup and logistical support for the memorial service, attended by more than a thousand visitors, many of them law enforcement and first responders from around the country and Canada. The foundation served as point of contact for volunteers, honor guard and city officials. “By the time we got to the funeral, they literally were running the entire town,” City Manager Mark Winstanley said. “They came in and they handled anything and everything that needed to be done in Seaside so all of the people in Seaside were able to go ahead and participate in the memorial.” The donation will be drawn as a contingency item from the city’s general fund, Winstanley said. “They did so much for us,” Councilor Tita Montero said. “I think $5,000 is a drop in the bucket.” Council President Don Johnson suggested a $10,000 gift, a figure unanimously endorsed by Mayor Don Larson and councilors. Funds could be used for the foundation’s operating costs, lodging or travel, Ham said after the meeting, as well as support for spouses and families of fallen officers. Goodding is survived by his wife, Amy, and two daughters. “They’re just a great organization,” Ham said. “They are dedicated. They’re deserving of funds from the city and anyone else who wants to donate. For them (City Council) to make that donation is exceptional and very pleasing.”
