

POINT of view

THE DAILY ASTORIAN // QUESTION OF THE WEEK

'What advice would you give to a graduating high school senior?'

"Take advantage of your education while you can. In today's economy, you need some sort of education or skill."

Macon Benoit, Astoria

"I definitely think they should go to college. It's worth-while."

Linda Keating, Astoria

"Don't jump right into going to college, and don't feel like you have to rush into that. Take some time to figure out what you're going to do."

May Dugas, Astoria

Oregon State offers dorm for recovering addicts

By ANDREW THEEN
The Oregonian

PORTLAND — Oregon State University will open an on-campus dorm this fall specifically designed for students recovering from drug and alcohol addiction.

The university said it believes the new housing and support center is the first of its kind in Oregon, at either a private or public institution.

Oregon State is converting the Dixon Lodge, a former student co-op living center, into the new dorm, which it is calling The Recovery and Learning Community. OSU alumnus Tom Skoro and his wife Joan are funding the center. The cost of the donation wasn't immediately available.

John Ruyak, Oregon States alcohol, drug and recovery specialist in the student health services office, said the housing and support center will provide a more supportive living environment for students in recovery. "Through a unified community, we seek to strengthen students' sobriety and support their success as academics, leaders, and community members," he said in a statement.

Oregon State already has a Collegiate Recovery Community, where students can get services, hang out with fellow students recovering from addictions, and book private rooms to "socialize in a sober environment."

But Steve Clark, a university spokesman, said separate living quarters are a necessary next step.

"There are students with drug and alcohol addictions who are in recovery and they're not being well-served by universities across the nation," Clark said.

While not all first-year students use and abuse alcohol or drugs in the dorms, Clark said, some students "may not be as mature in an independent living arrangement."

The new housing center will ideally be a mix of younger students and older non-traditional students who Clark said "have more of an experience with life."

In the first year, Oregon State expects nine students to live in the newly configured Dixon Lounge, with up to 24 students eventually moving into the dorm.

Oregon State is also providing scholarship opportunities for some students, Clark said, to bring down the cost of living. He said the dorms, in some cases, will be less expensive than student housing, which can cost from $5,000 to $10,000, not including food plans.

Students can move in this fall, and OSU said it still has space available.

Sewer project work resumes

The Daily Astorian

Work on Astoria's sewer improvement project will resume on 16th Street Monday.

The project is part of the overall plan to significantly reduce discharges of combined storm and sanitary sewage to the Columbia River and Youngs Bay. The scope of the remaining work includes construction on 16th Street from Duane Street to Lexington Avenue. Construction begins at the bottom of the hill at Duane with installation of new storm pipe, and progresses up the hill.

Street closures on 16th are expected during active construction, but streets will be open to traffic on the weekends.

OBITUARIES

Lucille Mae Bancroft Ingle

Ocean Park, Washington
Oct. 30, 1924 — May 28, 2016

Lucille Mae Bancroft Ingle passed away on Saturday, May 28, 2016, at her residence at Golden Sands Assisted Living Center in Ocean Park, Washington, at the age of 91.

She was born on Oct. 30, 1924, in Seattle, Washington, the daughter of George W. and Laura Jerusha Elizabeth Bowman Bancroft. Her mother died at Lucille's birth, and she was raised by her father and second mother, Sylvia Ruff Bancroft, in Seattle, where she received her education.

Lucille was married to Russell Lawrence Ingle on Dec. 12, 1941, in Tacoma. He preceded her in death on June 5, 2009, after 67 years of marriage. Due to Russell's occupation as an engineer in the construction of different hydroelectric dams and nuclear power plants, they traveled to different parts of the world and U.S., including New York, the Carolinas, California, overseas in the Philippines and Venezuela. After his retirement they settled on the Long Beach Peninsula in 1982, which has been her home since that time.

She enjoyed her travels, camping, classic car shows and her family gatherings.

Her family members who honor her memory include her three daughters and sons-in-law, Sherryan Ingle-Reische and Frank Reische of Salem, Oregon, Karen Ingle-Langendorfer and Bob Langendorfer of Ocean Park, Washington, and Pamela Ingle-Dutton and her husband, Brian Dutton, of Astoria, Oregon. Additionally, she is survived by her five grandchildren, Damon Reische and his wife, Jenne, of West Linn, Oregon; Jason Langendorfer and his wife, Tawnya, of Molalla, Oregon; Christopher Ingle of Ocean Park; Heather Langendorfer-Blackketter and her husband, Robert, of Tri-Cities, Washington; and Cassandra Brown and her husband, Boyd, of Warrenton, Oregon. She is also survived by five great-grandchildren, Cade Brown of Warrenton, Noah Reische of West Linn, Jenna and Jessica Langendorfer of Molalla, and Elizabeth Cowell of Tri-Cities, Washington.

A graveside service is being planned at the Oysterville Cemetery in Oysterville, Washington. Memorial contributions in her memory may be made to your favorite charity.

Updates to the day and time of the graveside ceremonies will be made, and an online guestbook may be signed at www.OceanViewAstoria.com

Ocean View Funeral & Cremation Services of Astoria is in charge of the funeral arrangements.
