Hundreds of local graduates turned their tassels over the weekend.

More than 150 students graduated Friday from Clatsop Community College with a two-year degree or one-year certificate.

More than half the college's graduates were from the Astoria-Warrenton region, along with 16 percent from South County, 14 percent from Washington state, and more than 10 percent from other Northwest Oregon counties.

Three local high schools also held graduations Friday and Saturday, including 54 seniors from Warrenton High School, 110 from Astoria and 27 from Knappa.

Robot submarine streams live off Oregon Coast

Associated Press

PORTLAND — A robot submarine is roaming around the ocean floor off the Oregon Coast in an effort to detect any geological activity underground, and researchers are offering a live stream of the underwater view.

The Oregonian/OregonLive reported that a 64-meter vessel operated by the Ocean Exploration Trust and its remotely operated vehicle, Hercules, are providing views of the Astoria Canyon through June 20. The live stream can be viewed at NautilusLive.org.

The mission off the Pacific Northwest is intended to find "methane seeps," where the natural greenhouse gas is released from the ocean floor along the Cascadia Subduction Zone. That's the fault line that's expected to one day cause what's known as the "big one," a 9.0-magnitude earthquake 95 miles off the coast of Oregon that results in a tsunami.
