Cascadia concerns extend far beyond the coast

Plan for aftermath in Eastern Oregon

By JADE McDOWELL East Oregonian

HERMISTON — When "the big one" hits Oregon, Hermiston residents will be facing weeks without electricity followed by a wave of up to 100,000 refugees from the west side of the state.

"The implications are pretty tremendous for us," Eastern Oregon Telecom CEO Joe Franell told Hermiston Chamber of Commerce members at a recent Business to Business luncheon.

He said Oregon State University predicts there is a 40 percent chance of a magnitude-9 Cascadia earthquake hitting Oregon in the next 50 years, which means the time to prepare is now.

Would you buy a lottery ticket if you had a 40 percent chance of winning?" he asked. "I would. So if there's a 40 percent chance of us losing, I think we should prepare."

Franell is chairman of the Oregon Broadband Advisory Council, and said the forecast is pretty grim. The Cascadia earthquake is predicted to last 4 to 6 minutes — decimating coastal cities, sending 80 percent of bridges in Portland tuma year without running water. Umatilla County's power would be out for six to eight weeks.

More than 90 percent of the state's fuel supply would be destroyed. Internet, television, cellphone service and other forms of communication would be down, and transportation to the west side of the state would mostly be limited to helicopters after the destruction of roads, highways and bridges.

To prepare for that situation, Franell said Umatilla County residents and businesses could help greatly by having enough food, water, batteries and other supplies stockpiled to help themselves through the first few weeks.

"Our goal is not to be an additional burden on recovery efforts," he said.

In addition to storing emergency supplies, Franell said residents should make sure top-heavy furniture is secured to the ground or to walls and buy an inexpensive harness to secure their hot water heater to the wall, preventing injuries and preserving the 50 gallons of water inside for use afterward.

He suggested businesses have plans in place for how to resume operations as quickly as possible after a disaster. He said they should encourage their employees to be prepared at home, ensuring they can return to work as quickly as possible as the state begins recovery efforts. He also suggested that some employees get certified in Incident Command Systems so that they will understand how the recovery efforts will work and the language that will be used.

The hard truth is, he said, a yearslong rebuilding of Oregon would generate substantial financial opportunities for businesses ready to help instead of needing help themselves.

Men charged for illegally recording sex with minor

Video was shared around high school

By KYLE SPURR The Daily Astorian

Two Knappa men are accused of secretly recording sex with an underage girl and sharing the video around their high school.

Cody James Carsner, 18, and James Michael Hendrickson, 18, pleaded not guilty Monday in Clatsop County Circuit Court to the charges. The two appeared via video link from jail.

Both are charged with invasion of personal privacy, using a child in display of sexually explicit conduct and first and second-degree encouraging child sex abuse.

The alleged incident occurred last fall and was reported to law enforcement

Hendrickson were indicted by a grand jury last month. A warrant was issued and the two were arrested and booked Saturday evening.

The victim, who was 16 at the time, was having sex with Carsner and Hendrickson was recording on a phone without her knowing, according to the District Attorney's Office.

The two young men had it cooked up in advance," Chief Deputy District Attorney Ron Brown said. "One had sex and the other recorded it."

The co-defendants are each being held in jail on $250,000 bail.

SEASIDE — Seaside Police have received three reports of counterfeit $100 bills circulating in the city.

The bills are dated 1990 and have the serial number E19856329A.

The suspect is described as a white female in her late 20s. She is about 5 feet 7 inches tall and thin with blond hair. She was last seen wearing black-rimmed glasses with white polka dots. She purchased heartshaped glasses. She was wearing a white tank top and black gladiator sandals with lots of silver rings on her fingers and toes. She may have had a red backpack.

She may be associated with an older gold sedan.

If anyone has had contact with the suspect or a counterfeit bill, they can contact Seaside Police at 503-738-6311. Seaside Police cautions all local businesses to take precautions when accepting any currency and report any suspicious activity. Police advised that the Secret Service no longer encourages the use of anti-counterfeit pens and they are no longer effective with today's method of counterfeiting.

Cultural Coalition looks for board members

The Daily Astorian

The Clatsop County Cultural Coalition is now taking applications for members of its board of directors.

The board members serve as local ambassadors for the Oregon Cultural Trust to re-grant funds to worthy projects that support, maintain, preserve and protect cultural programs in visual and performing arts, heritage and humanities in Clatsop County.

Coalition board members are unpaid volunteers who have a knowledge of of a local cultural organization, but will not represent that group in voting. Potential members should commit to attending three meetings yearly, and be available to work on special projects related to the coalition's mission. Most volunteer obligations take place in the fall, culminating in an awards ceremony in early December when local grant recipients are announced.

For information, or to obtain an application form, contact co-chair Janet Bowler at information@ clatsopculturalcoalition.org or call 503-325-2431. The life of Clatsop County. They deadline for applications is
