F. Warren Lovell, M.D.

Ventura, California

June 13, 1922 — July 15, 2016

Col. F. Warren Lovell, M.D., U.S. Air Force Reserve (Retired), of Ventura, California, passed away Friday, July 15, 2016, at age 94. Warren was born June 13, 1922, to Sherman Watson Lovell and Ruby Jane Dunn Lovell, in Astoria, Oregon.

His early years were spent in Astoria where he hunted, sailed, worked in a salmon cannery and helped out at Lovell Auto Co. He enlisted in the National Guard, and was home on weekend leave when his mom heard the news from Hawaii on Sunday morning, Dec. 7, 1941.

Warren became a member of 87th Mountain Infantry (precursor to 10th Mountain Division) U.S. Army in 1942, skiing and training in the snow on Mount Rainier. He was accepted into U.S. Army Air Corps pilot training program later that year, and qualified as a B-25G pilot. 1st Lt. Fred "Love" Lovell joined the 820th Bomb Squadron, 41st Bomb Group (M), 7th Air Force, and headed out to the Pacific. He and his crew saw the mushroom cloud over Nagasaki, Japan.

After the war, Warren enrolled in the University of Oregon, following his beloved brother, Bob. He joined the group of Lovell Phi Beta Kappas. In 1950, he and Mary Margaret Jones married and trekked to Chicago where he attended Northwestern Medical School. The couple made lifelong friends, and their kids started coming along.

Warren went back into the military, the U.S. Air Force by then, as a flying flight surgeon. He was assigned to the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

After leaving the Air Force, Warren worked as a hospital pathologist and opened a laboratory with partners in Seattle. He was also a partner in a cattle ranch, as well as being part of the Lovell Auto Co. He flew with the U.S. Air Force Reserve.

Warren was a board certified neuropathologist, but added forensics to the mix. After he and Mary divorced, he applied for a job in Ventura and was hired as medical examiner of Ventura County in 1981. He continued consulting on aircraft accidents, and also testified as an expert on police brutality cases.

He and June Ann Hendrickson married in Arvada, Colorado, in 1981. After her death in 2002, Warren married June Wineinger Seery (June No. 2) in 2004, in Ventura.

After retirement, Warren worked with University of California, Irvine, doing examinations as part of a study of schizophrenia. The Allen Institute also hired him to assist in their study, as well.

He loved music, studying languages, good food and travel, but most of all, talking to friends. He was active in Rotary for years and served on the board of the Salvation Army. He and both Junes attended Grace Lutheran Church, and appreciated the love and kindness of the congregation.

Warren is survived by his first wife, Mary Jones Hudson of Seattle; a sister-in-law, Mary Robinson Lovell of Astoria; and children Peggy (Joe Spah) and Sherman, all of the Seattle area, Robert (Marjie) of Makawao, Hawaii, Mary Jo (Chris Blazina) of Bainbridge Island, and Tina (Rick Brynsvold) of Shelby Township, Michigan. The proudest grandfather in the world leaves Katie, Matthew and Brendan Spah, Lily and Jemma Blazina and Douglas and Kristin Brynsvold. Warren was the very proud and loving uncle of Bill Lovell, Jane Lovell, Anne Saarheim-Riggs and Martha Dahl, as well as step-niece Angela Kalen. He is also survived by wife June No. 2; stepsons Michael and Peter Seery; and Archie the Wonder Dog.

A visitation will take place Friday, July 22, 2016, from 6 to 8 p.m. at Hughes-Ransom Mortuary, 576 12th St., Astoria, Oregon.

In lieu of flowers, donations to the Clatsop County Historical Society, Columbia River Maritime Museum, Clatsop County Animal Shelter or Grace Episcopal Church would be appreciated.

Astoria man gets six months in prison in celebrity hacking case

Stole explicit photos from celebrities

By ANTHONY McCARTNEY Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — An Astoria man who admitted hacking hundreds of email accounts and stealing explicit photos from several unidentified celebrities was sentenced Thursday to six months in federal prison.

U.S. District Judge John A. Kronstadt sentenced Andrew Helton to the prison term and two years of supervised release on Thursday.

Helton pleaded guilty in March to stealing 161 nude or explicit photos from 13 people, including unidentified celebrities. Authorities have said they do not believe any of the images he stole were publicly released. His arrest in 2013 preceded the leaking of hundreds of nude images of celebrities, including Oscar-winning actress Jennifer Lawrence, model Kate Upton and others.

"For more than two years, defendant Andrew Helton targeted, baited, and hooked unsuspecting victims with his phishing e-mails," Assistant United States Attorney Stephanie S. Christensen wrote in a filing urging Kronstadt to sentence Helton to at least a year in prison. "He targeted strangers, acquaintances, and celebrities alike. He trolled through their private e-mail accounts, accessing the most private of communications. He systematically pilfered nude and intimate images of his victims and stored them in his own computer for personal use."

His attorney contended Helton should not receive a prison sentence because the phishing technique Helton used was not technologically sophisticated. Helton said in lengthy remarks in court that his arrest forced him to confront his mental health issues and change his life. "For the last ... five years or so, I've been a dead man walking, so to speak," Helton said at the outset of lengthy comments about how his arrest changed his life.

"Mental illness took over my life and surrounded everything," Helton said. Court filings noted he was diagnosed with bipolar disorder after his arrest in 2013 and has been receiving treatment ever since.

He said for the first time in his life, he can envision a future and wants to help people. He told Kronstadt he has a book coming out of short stories that he hopes will help people who have to undergo certain surgical procedures.

"I have a better life now than I could have ever imagined," Helton said in court.

Kronstadt said Helton was clearly well-educated and had "a substantial amount of talent." Helton nodded when the judge told him that the case involved "very serious invasions of privacy," but Kronstadt said he hoped the sentence would allow Helton to move forward.

"I regard this as part of a new beginning," Kronstadt said.

Prosecutors say Helton's "phishing" scheme involved sending victims emails they thought were from Apple or Google. The messages asked victims to verify their email accounts by clicking on a link that took them to a phony website, where Helton collected their usernames and passwords.

With variances, Pearl of Seaside moves forward

Motel gets approval for height, parking variances

By R.J. MARX The Daily Astorian

SEASIDE — One motel will come down and another will go up as the Seaside Planning Commission approved variances for the Pearl of Seaside, a 48-room motel on the Prom.

The property is being developed by Antoine and Rocio Simmons of Haystack Lodgings, a management company that owns and operates boutique motels, including Seaside's Gilbert Inn, which the couple purchased in 2014.

"I don't want it to be a square box," Antoine Simmons said of the Pearl. "I want it to be something that is architecturally designed, that has some character. I want it to be something people discover, that's unique, one-of-a-kind."

Approval and findings, which include a height variance and setback adjustments to meet city parking standards, were presented Tuesday night by Planning Director Kevin Cupples.

The Pearl will replace the Inn at the Prom, which Simmons purchased in 2011 when it was the Edgewater. The property was built in 1920 as a home and "is in generally poor condition and in need of replacement," according to planning documents. Part of the Pearl will be built on a vacant property next door, now under contract with Simmons, which he described as "a serious eyesore to everyone."

Plans for the new hotel include a two-level parking garage on Beach Avenue with 41 inside spaces. An additional 10 outdoor spaces will be available on Avenue A. Only one level of the Beach Avenue garage will be visible from the street, he said. A variance was required to bring parking spaces to code.

Rooms are proposed for three floors, while a penthouse floor drawing shows five rooms capped by a tower roof.

Because of street grade differences on the property, the couple requested a 7-foot height variance to exceed the building height limit of 45 feet.

Antoine Simmons

"We're at 52 feet, next door, they're 51," Simmons said of the neighboring Promenade hotel. "We're pretty much mirrored. We're going to be side by side, same height."

While public comment was closed, neighbors have an opportunity to appeal to Seaside City Council. Deadline for appeal is Aug. 4.

Simmons said he plans to develop construction and mechanical designs, followed by room layout and design. Variance approval expires in one year from the decision date unless the permit is used or a time extension approved.

"We're very excited about the project," Simmons said. "We think it will be a beautiful addition to downtown. We're hoping to be something unique."

One dead, one rescued from ocean in Seaside

The Daily Astorian

SEASIDE — A young man died and another was rescued Thursday afternoon after struggling in the ocean in Seaside.

One male was rescued shortly after lifeguards and other emergency personnel arrived and was eventually flown to a Portland area hospital. The other male was identified by air by the U.S. Coast Guard before being brought to shore. He died, according to Jon Rahl, the city's public information officer.

The ages and names of the young males were not immediately released.

Seaside lifeguards, Seaside Fire & Rescue and the Coast Guard responded to the incident, which was reported at about 3:30 p.m.
