

The Daily Astorian's Whos Who

CHARTING THE NEWCOMERS AND BUSINESS PIONEERS OF OUR REGION

Patricia Fagerland began her business in July of 2013. She named it Forsythēa after a childhood memory forged by many years "playing in the garden" with her favorite neighbor, Erik. The Gallery/Gift shop celebrates nature-inspired artisan home & garden décor as well as a great selection of traditional toys, hand puppets and marionettes.

PHOG BOUNDER'S ANTIQUE MALL, owned by Tom and Debbie Schmidt, is located in the first building finished after the fire of 1922 at 892 Marine Drive, Astoria. The Morning Astorian, a newspaper, was the first business to operate in the building from 1923-1930. The Daily Messenger, also a newspaper, occupied the building from 1931-1933. The Astoria Egg & Poultry, and Maki Feed & Supply Company occupied the building from 1935-1946. In 1947 Sorenson's Auto Parts moved in until 1977, when Lon's New and Used Furniture took over until 2006. In 2006 Tom and Debbie purchased the building and moved Phog Bounder's Antique Mall from Commercial Street to their current location.

For Tom and Debbie, it is the perfect building and location for their business. The ambiance and historic feel enhances the merchandise their 50+ vendors supply for sale within both floors of the building.

THE FRANKLIN APARTMENTS

In 1915, McNaughton and Raymond of Portland, designed a three-story masonry structure in the early 20th Century Colonial Revival style, called the Franklin Apartments at 1432 Franklin Avenue. The building was very modern and luxurious for its time, offering studio apartments with kitchens and full bathrooms in each unit.

Well located adjacent to Astoria's Downtown, the building fortunately survived the fire of 1922 that destroyed so many properties in the nearby business district. Also fortunate, The Franklin Apartments has had very few owners and very few modifications during its first 100 years.

Most units retain their original woodwork, doors and window trim. Tall ceilings and large, fully-functioning double-hung six-, nine- or twelve-over-one windows allow considerable light into the units. Kitchens have original cabinets, some with glass in the cupboard doors and/or the original drain-boards in place. Claw-foot tubs sit on hexagon tile floors.

Other original, unique features abound, including marble faced entry and an antiquated intercom system in working condition.

With the recent change in ownership, The Franklin is undergoing an exterior renovation. Watch as the scaffold makes its way around the building this year, revitalizing the natural beauty of this local landmark!
