Celebrating 80 years of life on the edge

ASTORIA — Astoria artist Terrie Remington has lived an artist's life from a different time and era.

She will celebrate her 80th birthday at a reception open to the public during Astoria's Second Saturday Art Walk, 5 to 8 p.m. Aug. 13 at Luminari Arts. The reception will feature her artwork in the show "Living on the Edge," which reflects her philosophy of living with one foot up in the air.

From early childhood in a basement of a New York City brownstone, Remington has been creating art. Her first memories are of World War II air raid sirens and her mother struggling to feed the family during the Great Depression. But during that time she created her first mural in her kindergarten classroom. She knew she was an artist.

Adventure and study called her to travel. In Puerto Rico, Remington developed the sculptured painting medium style. Her use of sculpture and color explores the elusive connection between the spiritual and physical art form.

During an 11-year residency in Spain, Remington studied at the Escuela de Bellas Artes and opened a gallery in Barcelona during the military dictatorship of Francisco Franco. After his death, Remington sold paintings to the Duquesa de Villalba for the soon-to-be new King of Spain Juan Carlos.

Remington lived as an avant-garde artist. She traveled the world, spending time with climbers of Mt. Everest, learned flamenco dancing, and skied the major slopes. She owned a gallery on the Costa Brava in Spain and had annual shows in Madrid.

But, constantly, she felt the urge to move. In San Francisco she reestablished her art sales and studied with Frank Milner. She painted murals in Tahoe and Mendocino, California. In the 1980s, she established Uptown Gallery in Port Townsend, Washington. Then it was on to Seattle.

In 1996, Remington opened a home studio in Cannon Beach, finally moving to Astoria in 2000.

"This town has it all," she says. "I always lived the life of an artist with the thought I would live hard and die young. I now realize that living hard can also mean living longer and dying harder."

"But Astoria is a wonderful place to be for the last place I live. There is a peace here, and I no longer dream about where to go next. It is the first time that I have felt I am home."

Find handmade blouses, dresses and other items from around the globe.

17. Holly McHone Jewelers

1150 Commercial St.

Holly McHone Jewelers will feature the Astoria Bridge Pendant.

Designed by Holly and Kevin McHone, the pendant commemorates the 50th anniversary of the Astoria-Megler Bridge and features an Oregon sunstone to represent the area's sunsets. Refreshments will be served.

18. Muse Beauty Bar

1168 Commercial St., Suite 206

Muse Beauty Bar will hold its grand opening with an ocean-themed photobooth brought to you by Australian-born photographer and makeup artist Briony Kendall Staley. There will also be a trunk show of Tumbled 'n' Twisted Jewelry, featuring handmade designs inspired by the flora, fauna and geology of the Pacific Northwest. The venue is located upstairs in the historic Copeland building.

19. La Luna Loca

382 12th St.

Kate Carder, owner of Portland-based clothing company Tease, will show a line of up-cycled T-shirts and knits from 3 to 8 p.m. The clothing design and manufacturing company began in 2008 as a single project from a T-shirt. "It occurred to me that we could do this on a larger scale to provide hip, environmentally friendly clothing to the denizens of the Portland area," Carder said. Tease has grown to become a line of apparel and accessories, including skirts, scarves, shrugs, arm warmers and more. All products are reconstructed recycled materials. Carder will also show her clothing 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 14 at La Luna Loca's Cannon Beach location.
