

How were the Corps of Discovery and the War of 1812 connected?

History & Hops speaker to delve into specifics at Nov. 30 lecture

SEASIDE — The next History & Hops free local history lecture will take place at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 30 at Seaside Brewing Co., located at 851 Broadway. Due to Thanksgiving, this month's date has been adjusted from the usual last Thursday of the month to the last Wednesday of the month.

When thinking about the Lewis and Clark Expedition, the War of 1812 does not usually come to mind. But the two historical happenings are connected.

At History & Hops, Lorna Hainesworth, a self-described ambassador and national traveler, will share her research and findings about members of the Corps of Discovery and others closely associated who had significant life experiences during the War of 1812.

She'll use illustrations and contemporary maps to describe events of the war and shows current-day photographs of some of the places where members of the Lewis and Clark Expedition were known to have served. An essay on the subject will be available to event attendees.

Hainesworth has presented at many historical societies and events across the country.

History & Hops is a monthly series of local history discussions hosted by the Seaside Museum at Seaside Brewing Co.

The Seaside Museum and Historical Society is a nonprofit educational institution with the mission to collect, preserve and interpret materials illustrative of the history of Seaside and the surrounding area. The museum is located at 570 Necanicum Drive and is open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Find more information at www.seasidemuseum.org

Apply to be a board member on the Lower Nehalem Watershed Council

Deadline to apply is Dec. 15, members will be elected Jan. 12

NEHALEM — Might you, a colleague or a friend be interested in helping to guide your local watershed council in 2017? Are you enthusiastic about native fish? Love to better the environment and your community? Would you like to learn more about conserving and enhancing the Nehalem watershed? Then this might be the opportunity you are looking for: Lower Nehalem Watershed Council is seeking applications for its 2017 Board of Directors.

Watershed councils are locally organized, voluntary, non-regulatory groups established to improve the condition of watersheds in their local area. Watershed councils are made up of people from the local communities. They represent local knowledge and have ties to the existing community in all its complexities. Councils work across jurisdictional boundaries and agency mandates to look at the watershed more holistically. The council can be a forum to bring local, state and federal land management agencies and plans together with local property owners and private land managers. Through the council, partnerships between residents, local, state and federal agency staff and other groups can be developed

Local watershed councils are effective in the development and implementation of projects to maintain and restore the biological and physical process in the watersheds for the sustainability of their communities. Councils bring varied interests together in a non-regulatory setting to form a common vision for the ecological and economic sustainability and livability of their watershed. Councils often identify landowner participants for important projects, develop priorities for local projects, and establish goals and standards for future conditions in the watershed.

LNWC is a citizens' group and tax-exempt nonprofit corporation. The duties of a board member include providing leadership and direction to the council, guiding the work of the council, reviewing project and grant proposals, and regular attendance at monthly meetings. LNWC's board is made up of five to seven members, including the chair, vice chair, secretary and treasurer.

The Board of Directors meets monthly, typically from 3 to 5 p.m. the first Wednesday of the month, at Nehalem City Hall, which is located at 35900 Eighth St. The next LNWC meeting will be held Wednesday, Dec. 7. The agenda will include board elections, current and future projects, and other council business.

All are invited to apply to be a council board member. The council welcomes participation from a diverse citizenry, including active or retired farmers, foresters, woodland owners, rural and urban residents, business owners, and government, university or NGO staff and scientists. LNWC is committed to watershed improvement action (e.g. water quality, habitat for fish and wildlife) through community discussion, inclusive decision making and voluntary action. The council is dedicated to the protection, preservation and enhancement of the Nehalem watershed through leadership, cooperation and education. LNWC brings grant dollars to the area and leverages donations to achieve both programs and projects.

New Board of Directors members will be elected at the Jan. 12 Annual Meeting & Speaker Series event at 7 p.m. at the Pine Grove Community House, located at 225 Laneda Ave. in Manzanita.

Interested applicants should contact the council coordinator at lnwc@nehalemnet.net or 503-368-7424 for more information and to receive a Board of Directors nomination form. Nomination forms will be received until Dec. 15.
