Astoria man hit by car near Safeway

The Daily Astorian

An Astoria man is in a Portland area hospital after being hit by a car at an intersection near Safeway on Friday.

Rudy Gonzalez, 35, suffered various serious injuries including a broken leg and injuries to his face, according to the Astoria Police Department. He was taken by ambulance to Columbia Memorial Hospital minutes after the accident occurred that evening. He was later taken to a Portland area hospital for additional treatment.

The driver who hit him, 74-year-old Madeline Jones, from Washington state, has no charges against her and is cooperating with the investigation. She told police she had the green light and didn't see Gonzalez in the intersection. Witnesses told police Jones had the right of way and that Gonzalez appeared to wander into the intersection.

The accident occurred at 5:11 p.m. and shut down the eastbound lane on Lief Erikson Drive. Traffic had to be rerouted over to Franklin Avenue while emergency responders and police investigators were at the scene.

Seaside dispatchers, police officer recognized in aftermath of shooting

The Daily Astorian

Seaside's Dispatch Center received a critical incident award from their peers during the annual APCO/NENA conference of public safety communications at the Sunriver

Resort in Bend in October.

Dispatchers Heidi Schneider and Andi Toombs were present to accept the award on behalf of the entire dispatch team. Both were on duty the evening of Feb. 5 when Seaside Police Sgt. Jason Gooding was killed in the line of duty.

This month, the Oregon Peace Officers Association recognized Officer David Davidson with a medal of honor for his quick actions during the same officer involved shooting in February.

Seattle area home prices on the rise

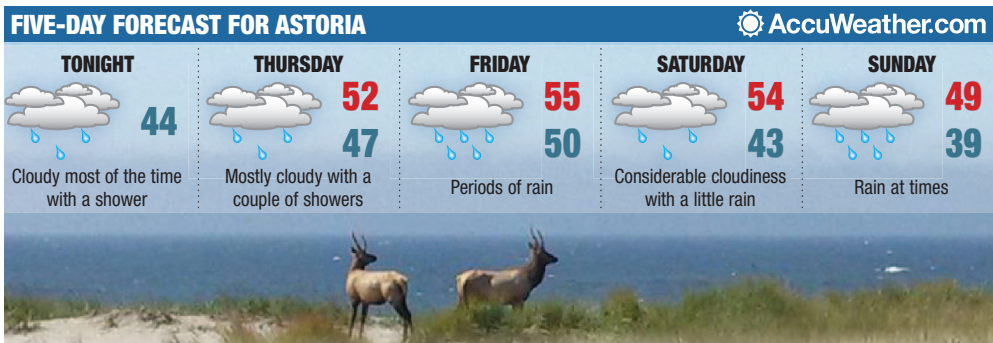

Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Seattle area has the hottest housing market in the country — the first time in nine years that Seattle has led the United States in home-price growth.

The Seattle Times reported the typical single-family home across King, Snohomish and Pierce counties cost 11 percent more in September than a year prior, according to the monthly Case-Shiller home price index released Tuesday. That marked the biggest increase among the 20 major metro areas covered.

OSHA cites company in longshoreman's death

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Federal regulators say simple safety measures could have kept a dockworker from falling to his death aboard a cargo ship in Longview, Washington, last June.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration on Tuesday cited the dockworker's employer, SSA Pacific, for what it described as willful safety violations aboard the Forest Trader.

The agency proposed a fine of just under $125,000, and noted that it has cited SSA Pacific or its parent company, SSA Marine, for similar violations in Florida and Oregon in the past three years.

Longshoreman Jim Meadows died after falling 10 feet onto the ship's metal deck while helping load timber at a Weyerhaeuser Co. dock. OSHA inspectors said the company failed to install netting or temporary platforms to protect workers from falls even after Meadows' death.

A spokeswoman for SSA Marine said the company did not have an immediate comment. The company has 15 days to contest the citation.
