Scientists claim new gibbon species — name it Skywalker

LONDON (AP) — Researchers claim they have identified a new species of gibbon — and have named it after Star Wars character Luke Skywalker. Scientists studying hoolock gibbons on China's Mount Gaoligong concluded there were two, not one, species based on the primate's distinctive brow and a genetic analysis. The study was published in the American Journal of Primatology. The proposed new species is called the Skywalker hoolock gibbon or Gaoligong hoolock gibbon.

Actor Mark Hamill, who played Skywalker in the film, tweeted: "So proud of this! First the Pez dispenser, then the Underoos & U.S. postage stamp... now this!"

Pick the new Monopoly tokens

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Hashtags, emojis and even a rubber duck may replace dogs, cats and hats in an upcoming version of the Monopoly board game. Hasbro Inc. began a world-wide contest Tuesday to let people choose the eight tokens to be included in the next generation of the property acquisition game, based on the real-life streets of Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Longtime staples including the hat, the Scottie dog and the wheelbarrow could be replaced by a winking emoji, a hashtag, a clunky '80s-style cellphone, or a pair of bunny slippers.

Voting runs through Jan. 31 at www.VoteMonopoly.com, and results will be announced on March 19. The version of the game with the new fan-picked tokens will go on sale in August.

Chef brings attention to cuisine of Melania Trump's homeland

The tiny European nation of Slovenia is getting an outsize share of attention lately. Not only has Melania Trump given her native country a boost of recognition, but Slovenia's also undergoing a tourism boom. Nearly 3 million foreign tourists visit a year now — in a country of 2 million.

On a recent evening in New York, tourism officials touted the attractions of this ex-communist land that broke off from Yugoslavia in 1991. Among the draws was the food of chef Ana Ros, who starred in an episode of Netflix's "Chef's Table." Her restaurant in a remote village inn wows foodies with dishes like fried white asparagus, and pork with lobster, ginger and pickled garlic.
