Women's march in Astoria set

ASTORIA — A group of Clatsop County women are planning a Women's March on Saturday, Jan. 21 in downtown Astoria.

The march is set to coincide with similar marches around the country, including the primary Women's March on Washington in Washington, D.C., which aims to send a message of solidarity and human rights to all levels of government.

"We applaud the Clatsop County women going to the D.C. and Portland marches," Astoria group committee member Laurie Caplan said in an email. "At the same time, we believe it's essential for every community, not just major cities, to speak out at this critical time for equal justice, civility, safety, and a healthy planet."

All who believe in democracy and equal rights are invited to join the walk. Husbands, partners, children and friends are welcome.

Marchers will gather at 11:30 a.m. in the public parking lot at 12th and Exchange streets. After a welcome at noon, the march will begin, making its way through downtown Astoria on a route less than a mile long.

The march will wrap up at 1:15 p.m. with speakers Kit Ketcham, Margaret Frimoth and Tom Horning.
