

Oregon backs Washington state lawsuit

Associated Press

SALEM — Oregon Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum's office said it is joining the legal fight playing out against President Donald Trump's immigration travel ban.

Ellen Rosenblum

Rosenblum said Monday that Oregon is supporting Washington state's lawsuit against Trump's executive order by signing a friend of the court brief in the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals along with more than a dozen other states.

Last week a federal judge in Seattle ordered a temporary halt to Trump's order banning the entry of people from seven Muslim-majority countries. Rosenblum said Monday her office is ready to assist in the Washington state lawsuit however it can. Rosenblum also said she will seek to have Oregon added to the lawsuit. A federal appellate court has scheduled telephone oral arguments for this afternoon in a lawsuit over the president's travel and refugee ban. The San Francisco-based 9th Circuit will hear from lawyers from the federal government and states suing Trump. Washington state and Minnesota sued Trump last week, saying the ban harmed residents and effectively mandated discrimination. The Justice Department says the issue is a matter of national security and Trump's executive order was well within his authority.

an apartment on Jan. 10. Residents located a pair of boots after a ground search on Jan. 22 on the Highway 103 bridge near Tweedle Road. Judge is believed to have worn the boots on the night of her disappearance. A water and ground search on Jan. 28 as well as several air searches did not lead to any additional clues. Deputies said they are still investigating, but there is no evidence to establish that Judge's disappearance is the result of a criminal act. Anyone with information regarding the case is encouraged to call 503-325-2061.

Senate confirms education secretary after 50-50 tie

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Ron Wyden and U.S. Sen. Jeff Merkley of Oregon voted against school choice activist Betsy DeVos as education secretary, but the controversial nominee was confirmed today after Vice President Mike Pence broke a 50-50 tie.

it was the first time a vice president had to break a tie on a Cabinet nomination. Two Republicans joined Democrats today to vote to derail DeVos' nomination. Democrats cited her lack of public school experience and financial interests in organizations pushing charter schools. DeVos has said she would divest herself from those organizations. Republicans Susan Collins of Maine and Lisa Murkowski of Alaska fear that DeVos' focus on charter schools will undermine remote public schools in their states. In an earlier tweet, President Donald Trump wrote "Betsy DeVos is a reformer, and she is going to be a great Education Sec. for our kids!"

SEASIDE — Police and firefighters paid tribute to their fallen comrade, Seaside Police Sgt. Jason Goodding, with an overnight vigil in front of the Pig 'N Pancake.

Throughout the night Sunday and over the day Monday, first responders, residents and visitors came to pay their respects to Goodding, who was shot and killed in the line of duty trying to apprehend Phillip Max Ferry on a felony warrant.

His death brought an outpouring of support from the community and emergency personnel around the nation. Sunday marked one year since his death.

"We remember our fallen hero every day, but this evening we begin a memorial watch that will continue through early tomorrow night," the police department posted on its Facebook page, garnering hundreds of responses and shares. "Every two hours, Seaside Police officers, Seaside firefighters and other local agencies will change post while releasing a blue balloon, honoring the legacy of an incredible individual. We miss you, Jason."

At the scene, in prayers and in tears, visitors paid tribute to Goodding.

The vigil began Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Seaside Fire Chief Joey Daniels said, a tribute to the hour of the shooting.

Seaside Fire Department Div. Chief Chris Dugan and volunteer Roy Dague stood watch Monday morning, stationed in front of the wreath dedicated to Goodding.

chief of operations for the fire department, arrived for the noon-to-2 p.m. shift.

"It's worth honoring Jason's legacy, and not let us forget what he was doing down here," Rankin said. "Really, what all our police officers do. I don't think our police officers get thanked enough."

Rankin said lessons could be gained from the tragedy. "As terrible as it is and was, I think it's also helped to bring us closer together," he said. "To realize at times of crisis it can bring us together and become a better family and it's helped to up our operational and planning stages as far. We're a small town. Bad things can happen down here. We need to be prepared for them."

Seaside's Jay Pitman, commander and president of the Clatsop County Sons of Beaches, a four-wheel drive club, paid his respects.

"I've got current military, veterans, and active duty personnel who have been out here all evening to show their support," Pitman said. "You've heard the slogan 'I've got your back.' That's why we're here. This vigilance is to show the local authorities — the fire department, the police department, the sheriff's department, the state police everybody who's been here — when something happens and they need our support, our club is here to help support them and we've got their back."

The wreath in Goodding's honor was delivered at the Seaside Civic and Convention Center later at a private ceremony for public safety personnel.

Columbia County deputy calls Clatskanie Fire Department 'dodos'

Associated Press

The Columbia County Sheriff's Office is reviewing an incident where a deputy called a fire department "dodos" and an assault victim lying in the street a "speed bump."

Columbia County Sheriff Jeffrey M. Dickerson told The

Oregonian that a meeting is planned to discuss the matter.

Authorities say the recorded 911 calls made to the on-call deputy's home occurred at about 2:15 a.m. on Jan. 15.

The deputy asked to have the Clatskanie Fire Department respond as it would be faster.

The dispatcher called back to say the fire department requested law enforcement, prompting the 'dodos' remark from the deputy.

Dickerson says the deputy correctly determined the victim would be best served if the fire department responded immediately.
