Ghosting, shade, microaggression hit Merriam-Webster website

NEW YORK (AP) — Attention, word nerds: This is your bonus round, courtesy of Merriam-Webster.

In addition to elevating "surreal" in 2016 to word of the year, the dictionary company on Tuesday added about 1,000 new words and definitions to Merriam-webster.com

Among them: "arancini," those stuffed, breaded and fried Italian rice balls, "conlang," meaning an invented language, "fast fashion" and "microaggression," a flash-point favorite on some college campuses.

This is the first time the company has freshened up website listings since 2014.

"Some of these we've been watching for many years, and some of these are very new words," said Peter Sokolowski, Merriam-Webster's editor at large.

Conlang: "This is a personal favorite because this is a linguistics word," said Sokolowski. In addition to Klingon, a made-up language on "Star Trek," Elvish of "The Lord of the Rings" is another example.

Fast Fashion: When manufacturers can quickly bring fashion to market at relatively inexpensive prices, such as the wares sold by H&M, Zara and Topshop. Fashion designers have embraced moving looks into stores straight from runways, as opposed to showing collections ahead of seasons.

Microaggression: Merriam-Webster defines it: "A comment or action that subtly and often unconsciously or unintentionally expresses a prejudiced attitude toward a member of a marginalized group (such as a racial minority)."

Ghost: An informal definition has been added, for abruptly cutting off contact with someone, such as a former romantic partner, by not responding to calls and messages.

The fresh entries also include: "Seussian," for "having a playful or outlandish quality" relating to children's writer Dr. Seuss; "microbiome," for communities of bacteria, fungi and viruses inhabiting an environment, like the human body; and recognition for a slang definition of "shade," as in throwing some publicly as a subtle or indirect insult.
