is what our company is doing. One of our innovations, called Marketplace, recently won first place in a national competition. The Local Media Association, a national organization, gave EO Media Group first place in the category of Best New Digital Initiative. It was sweet recognition, because our team was pitted against much larger media organizations.

Even with the overlay of technology, our company's basic mission remains the same — and that is news gathering. When I arrived here in February, reporter Kathleen Ellyn had finished a major article on how the Affordable Care Act affects Wallowa County and its hospital. Ellyn's got to the heart of how the ACA debate in Congress affects rural America. Two weeks later reporter Steve Tool turned out a story freighted with emotion — on bullying in the local schools.

City dwellers succumb to the illusion that big things don't happen in small, ruralplaces. But they do. More-over, the human fabric insmall towns is just as rich asin cities. Our small weekly,the Blue Mountain Eagle, in2010 covered a huge storywhen a branch of the AryanNation sought to make GrantCounty its new home.onabouabouEastMaragaiSedite2010
