Bill would eliminate obsolete boards, commissions

Some boards venture deeply into esoterica

By CLAIRE WITHYCOMBE and PARIS ACHEN Capital Bureau

SALEM — A bill in the state Legislature would do away with a dozen obsolete state boards and commissions, ranging from the Baseball Advisory Committee to the Task Force on Military

According to a list compiled by the Legislative Policy and Research Office last year, the state has more than 250 boards and commissions, some of which venture deep into bureaucratic esoterica, such as the Board of Denture Technology and the Board of Electrologists and Body Art Practitioners.

These entities serve varying purposes — some regulate professions and in so doing play a role in public health; others make policy recommendations.

There is sometimes no distinction between a board, commission, committee or task force. For instance, a commission may oversee a state agency or a particular industry. Generally, task forces are used to address a particular issue on a temporary basis, while boards, commissions and committees usually function regularly.

State Sen. Chuck Riley, D-Hillsboro, the chairman of the Senate Committee on General Government and Accountability, said his committee sought to make a list of commissions and boards that hadn't met recently.

"That's the kind of thing I'm interested in, making the government as transparent as possible, get rid of things that aren't needed, or don't make any sense," Riley said. "And this was a good place to start."

Little activity

The Legislative Policy and Research Office found 46 boards, commissions and task forces that "showed no evidence of activity" in the past year. The list was whittled down as officials learned some bodies were required by federal law, others only met intermittently by design, and others still after legislative counsel found some needed to be kept to "honor the formalities of interstate compact language."

and Accountability Committee discussed culling the collection of boards and commissions at a meeting in December.

"Honestly, governors have been trying to whittle down the list for many years, and have not done so because the Legislature hasn't helped," Riley said. "And I wasn't asked by the governor to do this, but I think she'll be pleased."

Sen. Elizabeth Steiner Hayward, D-Beaverton, said at the time she felt that the list of proposed reductions didn't go far enough.

"I would certainly be supportive of starting to take a hard look at other boards and commissions about, even the ones that are meeting, about what they are actually contributing and how much the state is paying for their existence," she said.

Public participation

Sen. Kim Thatcher, R-Keizer, said she wondered how the public could attend even 10 percent of the meetings of the state's various public boards and commissions.

"I don't think there is public participation," Thatcher said. "There's a facade of public participation in that the public is invited, but there's so many, it's just overwhelming."

The list compiled by the policy and research office did not include the state's agricultural commodity commissions.

The trend of using boards and commissions to make policy dates back to the 1880s in the United States, when civil service inspired a desire to involve the public and those affected by policies in the process of policymaking, said Jim Moore, political science professor at Pacific Univer-

NO BUDGET IMPACT

After an amendment to the legislation, the following 12 boards and commissions would be eliminated:

- The Baseball Advisory Committee;
- The Board of Directors for the Oregon School for the Deaf;
- The Committee on Performance Excellence;
- The Governor's Council on Oregon's Economy;
- The Military Council;
- The Natural Resources Policy Administrator;
- The Oregon Progress Board;
- The Outdoor Youth Program Advisory Board;
- The Public Officials Compensation Commis-
- The Special Legislative Committee on Public Education Appropriation;
- The Task Force on Military Families;
- The Western States Legislative Forestry Task Force.

Some of the boards arose out of a new need for regulations, such as the creation of the aeronautics board in response to the invention of the airplane. Others stem from requests from professionals who want to be regulated by the state, Moore said.

Efforts to downsize state boards and commissions have been a perennial project for governors. Govs. Vic Atiyeh, Mark Hatfield and Barbara Roberts all spearheaded such efforts, Moore said.

"It is a good way to say you're shrinking the size of government without shrinking the size of government," Moore said.

Felix Caballero

March 24, 1928. Felix passed away April 12, 2017 in Longview, Washington. Felix's early youth took place in Spain at a tumultuous time, just as the country was on the brink of civil war. When the Caballero family needed to escape in 1936, circumstances required Felix and his older brother Victor to remain in Spain under the care of a monastic order, while the family sought refuge in the U.S.

Later, thanks in part to the American Red Cross, 11-year-old Victor and 10-year-old Felix traveled together across the Atlantic Ocean on the ship named Vulcania, and arrived at Ellis Island on Sept. 30, 1938, to rejoin their family who settled in Carteret, New Jersey. Later the family moved to the Los Angeles area, where Felix attended school.

At the age of 18, he enlisted in the U.S. Army and was stationed in Panama. Shortly after his discharge from the Army, Felix was hired by Union Pacific Railroad as an upholsterer, and worked for them for 20 years. He married Eileen Bay on Feb. 24, 1971, in Las Vegas. She preceded him in death Nov. 12, 2007.

After retiring from Union Pacific Railroad, he became a self-employed upholsterer in Compton, California. The couple moved to Astoria in 1971, where they opened Bay's Upholstery, and Felix worked until his health failed in 2015. Working in his upholstery shop was Felix's passion, and he enjoyed visiting with his customers. He also enjoyed raising and spending time with his Boston terriers. In 2016, Cab moved to the Walker house in Longview, Washington, where he lived until his death. He is survived by a brother, Fernando Caballero of Rosemead, California; a sister-in-law, Jeanne Fluhrer of Clatskanie, Oregon; two brothersin-law, Richard Bay of La Center, Washington, and Glen Bay of Minneapolis, Minnesota; and many nephews and nieces, including Victor Caballero of Pasadena, California, Dan Caballero of Whittier, California, Derrick Fluhrer of Sammamish, Washington, and Scott Fluhrer of Miami, Florida.

Graveside services will be held Friday, April 21, 2017, at 11 a.m., at Knappa Prairie Cemetery, 92924 Knappa Dock Road, Astoria, OR
