Cannon Beach commemorates Beach Bill signing's 50th anniversary

CANNON BEACH — In honor of the 50th anniversary of the signing of Oregon's Beach Bill, Cannon Beach will hold a day-long series of celebratory events Saturday, May 13.

Master sand sculpting team Form Finders will construct a sandcastle more than 6-feet tall. There will be beach bicycling and stand-up paddle boarding demonstrations.

Meanwhile, the city's Haystack Rock Awareness Program will offer tide pool interpretive information; spotting scopes will be on hand to view tufted puffins and other seabirds nesting on the rock.

Geologist Tom Horning, working with the North Coast Land Conservancy, will hold a guided hiking tour on the beach, from Haystack Rock to Silver Point.

Local and state dignitaries will give presentations at the Gower Street beach access, where the design plan for a Beach Bill-related public art project will be revealed, event organizers said.

Slater Smith, of the Portland band The Weather Machine, will present the band's collaboration with the state parks department: a music video shot at almost 200 state parks.

Saturday's festivities will conclude with a bonfire and free s'mores on the beach near the Gower Street access.

Passed by the state legislature in 1967, the landmark Beach Bill ensured that all of Oregon's beaches would remain public.

For more information and a schedule of activities, call the Cannon Beach Information Center at 503-436-2623, or visit www.cannonbeach.org/explore/beach-bill-celebration-in-cannon-beach-on-the-north-oregon-coast.
