The U.S. Coast Guard rescued a boater who capsized near the Lewis and Clark Bridge near Warrenton Friday.

Sector Columbia River watchstanders at Air Station Astoria answered a call from local 911 dispatchers of an overturned vessel near the bridge with a man clinging to the side.

The watchstanders vectored in a nearby Columbia River Bar Pilot helicopter crew, who stayed on scene with the man until the Coast Guard arrived. An MH-60 Jayhawk helicopter from the air station and a 29-foot small response boat from Station Cape Disappointment launched to respond.

and transported him to the air station, where he was released.

"In this case, the man in the water was not wearing a life jacket," Petty Officer 1st Class John Bennett, an operations specialist with the sector, said in a statement. "Thankfully, nearby assets were able to quickly respond before this man could find himself in any more trouble."

One killed, several injured in Highway 101 crash

The Daily Astorian

WARRENTON — A collision between a car and a box truck on U.S. Highway 101 in Warrenton early Sunday left one person dead and several injured.

According to the Oregon State Police, a 2007 Ford Focus driven by 18-year-old Ronald Cable of Elma, Washington, was traveling northbound on U.S. Highway 101 near milepost 7.5 when it crossed over the center line into the path of a 2017 Freightliner truck operated by 45-year-old Freddy Pina-Lopez.

Cable was taken to Columbia Memorial Hospital with serious injuries. Back-seat passenger Devon Brearty, 19, from Elma, was taken to Columbia Memorial and later Oregon Health and Science University with serious injuries. Fellow back-seat passenger Eliana Brearty, 16, from Elma, was taken to Columbia Memorial with minor injuries.

A 15 year old front-seat passenger, also from Elma, died as a result of injuries sustained in the crash. Sgt. Jeff Proulx said state police do not release the names of deceased minors. Fatigue and marijuana use are being considered as contributing factors in the crash.

Pina-Lopez was taken to Columbia Memorial with minor injuries.

Grant awarded for student habitat enhancement project

The Daily Astorian

The Oregon Watershed Enhancement Board has awarded $31,515 to the Lower Columbia Estuary Partnership for the North Coast Outreach Project.

The award was one of 89 grants totaling more than $9.3 million provided to local organizations statewide to support fish and wildlife habitat and water quality projects.

The North Coast Outreach Project provides fourth- to sixth-grade students and teachers along the Columbia River from Astoria to Scappoose the opportunity to plant native trees, remove invasive plants to enhance habitat, paddle the estuary in canoes and explore and learn about their watershed outdoors. The project will take place over the 2017-18 school year.

"The Estuary Partnership's classroom lessons on stream health, habitats and the importance of native plants properly prepares students for field trip activities at Fort Stevens State Park, where they have the unique opportunity to study a watershed up close," Peter Grauff, a teacher at Lewis and Clark Elementary School, said in a release. "Students also improve the watershed and our community by removing invasive Scotch broom. At the end of the field trip, students leave with a sense of accomplishment, along with a greater connection to the land and the watershed."

Funding for grants comes from the Oregon Lottery, salmon-themed license plate revenues and federal Pacific Coast salmon recovery funds from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Dead man found near Naselle intersection

EO Media Group

NASELLE, Wash. — While investigating a report of a "suspicious person" Thursday, police discovered a body.

At about 8 p.m., the Pacific County Sheriff's Office was called to a business near the intersection of State Route

4 and State Route 401 in Naselle. The caller said he had noticed a man was still in the same spot where he was seen the day before.

Sheriff Scott Johnson found the man's body in the tall grass near the business.

Officers from Long Beach Police and Washington State Patrol assisted with a death investigation, which closed the surrounding area for several hours.

The investigation is ongoing, but police do not suspect any type of foul play, according to a statement posted on the Sheriff's Office's Facebook page. The name of the dead man has not been released yet.

College gets Upward Bound grant

The Daily Astorian

Clatsop Community College has received a new $305,486 grant lasting five years from the U.S. Department of Education to continue funding the Upward Bound Program.

Upward Bound is one of three federally-funded TRiO outreach and student services programs at the college. The program helps 73 high school students in Astoria, Warrenton and Seaside to finish high school and go on to college. Upward Bound also matches students with an adult advocate who serves as their adviser.

The college has had an Upward Bound program since 1992.

Over the last four years, 100 percent of Upward Bound students have graduated high school, while 83 percent started college the fall after high school graduation, above the national rate of 68 percent.

The other TRiO programs are Talent Search, which also works with high school students, and Student Support Services, which works with college students.

The programs work with low-income and first-generation college students, focusing on academic achievement, college and career preparation, financial aid, student advocacy, community and cultural exposure, tutoring services and skill-building.
