recruit in the nearby Schofield Barracks when the Japanese attacked. Keeth, 92, is one of the region's last Pearl Harbor survivors. He went on to fight across the Pacific Ocean in Guadalcanal and Vella Lavella in the Solomon Islands.

Keeth's daughter, Donna Barnett, said her father's memory is "still all right there," adding he still gets emotional when the subject of Pearl Harbor comes up.

A U.S. Coast Guard Dolphin helicopter flew past to honor those who have died at sea. Past Clatsop Post 12 Cmdr. Mike Phillips listed the locals confirmed lost in various conflicts throughout history, including 31 in World War I, 67 in World War II, three in the Korean War, at least 14 in Vietnam, five in the Middle East and one in El Salvador. Post member Bill Elder rang the bell eight times to signify the end of watch for those lost.

"When a person is lost in the service of their country, that's probably the most honorable and most ... poignant comment to make in our society," post Chaplain Kenneth Rislow said. "Men and women are willing to give everything for the continuance of a noble experiment in democracy."

Warrenton's statue

Many of those in attendance at Ocean View Cemetery Monday then made their way to the U.S. Post Office in Warrenton for the Veterans of Foreign Wars Fort Stevens Post 10580's annual flag-changing ceremony. The VFW recently announced it will soon break ground near the post office for a bronze statue of a nameless soldier to honor the Warrenton-Hammond area's veterans.

Several Gold Star parents were given roses at Monday's Memorial Day service at Ocean View Cemetery in honor of the children they lost in combat.

of the post, said the statue will stand more than 7 feet tall on top of a nine-sided, 6-foot pedestal. On seven sides of the pedestal — one for each branch of the U.S. uniformed services — will be plaques with the names of Warrenton-area veterans.

Warren said the post has raised about $28,000 selling named bricks that will be placed in a wall around the statue. The fundraising acted as a match on a $72,000 grant from the state Parks and Recreation Department. Debbie Little, who wrote the application for the grant, said this will be the first such monument since Astoria's Doughboy, dedicated in 1926 to honor World War I veterans.

Little said the VFW is still selling bricks, which can be purchased online at www.vfw-fortstevens10580.com or by contacting the post's Quartermaster Albert Little at 503-739-1071.

Maritime Memorial

In Astoria, hundreds gathered at the Maritime Memorial Park in Uniontown to pay their respects to those whose names are inscribed on the walls on Memorial Day.

gave us," Johnson said. "One doesn't substitute for the other."

The 1.5 percent of state lottery funds to be set aside by voters after passage of Measure 96 in November could reach $28 million, Johnson said.

Funds could be used to help veterans access health care or housing, along with employment, education and treatment programs.

Boy Scouts

Cannon Beach Police Chief Jason Schermerhorn, acting in his capacity as assistant scoutmaster of Troop 642, called the Seaside Legion's Memorial Day observance a "great event for the boys."

"We come around 9; we help set the tent and the chairs up," Schermerhorn said. "It's good for them to give back to those who fought for their country."

Scout Toby Tackitt said he was inspired by a member of his family who served in the Marines.

Schermerhorn's son, Jackson, was among the Scouts. "My grandfather was in the Navy and my great-grandfather was in the military," Jackson Schermerhorn said with pride.
