Recital time for Maddox dancers

ASTORIA — Every June for the last 67 years, the students of Maddox Dance Studio take the stage at Astoria High School auditorium for a season finale, with dancers age 3 to senior citizens performing in a variety of dance styles.

Four shows will make for a weekend of entertainment.

• At 2 p.m. Saturday, June 17, the spotlight shines on the Young Choreographers of 2017, dancers from the Little Ballet Theatre company who are performing their self-choreographed routines, with music and costuming they chose.

Afterward will be a staging of a short version of the ballet "Cinderella," with Astoria High School sophomore Andrea Harris starring as Cinderella. Members of Little Ballet Theatre fill the roles of fairies, mice and villagers.

Admission is a donation to the Food Bank.

• At 6 p.m. Saturday, June 17, the audience will see dancers age 7 to 18 in many styles of dance and musical theater produced by Madsen, Allen, Caroline Wright and Kelly Eckstein.

Admission is $10 for adults, $5 for seniors and children. A pink lemonade party will be served in the commons afterward.

• At 2 p.m. Sunday, June 18, the little dancers and acrobats come on stage to showcase their skills learned under the direction of Madsen, Allen, Wright, Eckstein, Peterson and Cheryl Klatt. There will also be a second performance of "Cinderella."

Afterward, the cast will lead the audience to the commons for refreshments.

• At 6 p.m. Sunday, July 18, a show will feature more teen and adult dancers. In addition, the Acrobatic Arts students will display their progress in the acrobatic dance form. The audience and cast can meet up for pictures and conversation in the commons, and enjoy refreshments to wrap up the weekend.

Admission for the Sunday shows is the same as the evening show Saturday, June 17: $10 adults, $5 seniors and children.

Tickets can be purchased 30 minutes before each performance.
