

SEAVIEW

BEACH, DUNES AND COMFORTABLE RECREATION

Seaview was founded in 1881 by Jonathon L. Stout and his wife, Anne Elizabeth Gearhart, daughter of Phillip Gearhart, for whom the town in northwest Oregon is named. The two villages share parallel traditions of history and charm.

Seaview is located between Ilwaco and Long Beach but has a character very distinct from its two neighbors. It is, most would agree, one of the Peninsula's most "classy" villages.

Seaview is home to some wonderful B&Bs and restaurants, including the comfortable Shelburne Inn — a National Historical Landmark — and the fantastic Depot Restaurant. Also check out the eclectic Sou'wester Lodge & Cabins.

Seaview's water-front is a popular launching spot for walks south and north on the Northwest's longest beach.

It is somewhat less busy in the summer than the Long Beach seashore access routes to the north, and thus makes for a more peaceful setting.

It is in Seaview where growth (also called accretion) of the beach is most noticeable, with 2,000 feet or more of dunes separating the village's original shoreline from the ocean today. This means several shipwreck sites lie under what is now dry land, including those of the Vandalia which wrecked in 1853 with a loss of nine lives, and the Marie, which wrecked in 1852, also with a loss of nine.

This is a classic Northwest beach, the original seashore resort for the Portland elite, and deservedly so. There are miles of clean sand, many shorebirds, friendly people and pretty views of the distant cliffs and bobbing crab boats.

The Discovery Trail threads its way through the Seaview dunes, providing a walking/biking path all the way from northern Long Beach to Ilwaco.

Clam diggers, surf fishermen and hardy surfers enjoy the Peninsula's southern beach from Seaview to Fishing Rocks in Cape Disappointment State Park. — OBSERVER FILE PHOTO

to soothe sore muscles & relieve stress swedish massage, deep tissue massage & heated stone treatment
certified in advanced myofascial technique
gift certificates
31 years experience #12715

dianne duprez, lmp, camt
massage therapy

642-8227 • Seaview

ANTIQUES, COLLECTIBLES, BOOKS & FURNITURE

Long Beach Peninsula
TRADING POST

22604 Pacific Hwy.
Ocean Park, WA 98640

665-3611 • WE BUY ESTATES

Open 7 Days a Week 10am-5pm • Bob & Brenda Hill