If you find a rare brew worth more than a taster, bring a half-gallon growler anytime on “Growler Fill Sunday,” and take it home full for $10.

Some of Astoria’s favorite food trucks will be on hand, including Finni’s Fine Italian, Monte Alban Mexican, The Good Bowl and Hot Box BBQ.

Music, people

Festivalgoers will be able to raise their glass to 16 bands over the weekend. The lineup includes Anita Margarita, The Rattlesnakes and Turtle Vandemarr on Friday night, Sassparilla on Saturday night, and Benyaro wrapping up the festival on Sunday.

“This is as much a music festival as a beer festival,” Harris said. With a mix of local bands — and a few from farther afield — “the Brew Cup gets better every year. And the sound quality is great.”

As with most fun outdoor events in Astoria, the Brew Cup is family-friendly, even pet-friendly. Astoria’s Purple Cow Toys hosts activities for the kiddos that include hula-hooping, giant bubble-blowing, sidewalk chalk art and more.

The ADHDA will also be debuting their new “Shop Local, Shop Plaid” campaign, aimed at bringing awareness to the importance of shopping local to our regional economy. Shopping Plaid means you think of downtown Astoria first, and big box stores or internet retailers second. The first fifty people to purchase Brew Cup glassware each day will also receive a reusable “Shop Local, Shop Plaid” tote bag with shopping offers good for the weekend.

Prosperity of local businesses

Brew Cup is the biggest fundraiser for the association, and helps fund such things as downtown clean-ups, holiday decorations, sidewalk restoration, Art Walks and “all programs to make Astoria more fun,” said Dulcye Taylor, board president of the historic district association.

The goal for the whole event, Taylor said, is to use local resources before going out of the area: food trucks, things to eat and drink, supplies from local businesses. “That’s what our organization is about: The prosperity of local businesses.”

The Brew Cup also relies on the support of local sponsors, such as Pacific Power, Carruthers restaurant, Craft3 nontraditional lending and Lum’s Auto Center.

Sarah Lu Heath, ADHDA executive director, said, “Without the generosity of these sponsors, not only would the Brew Cup not be what it is, but Astoria wouldn’t be what it is.”
