

POINT of view

THE DAILY ASTORIAN // QUESTION OF THE WEEK

'What shopping options should be added to downtown Astoria?'

"There's no room to put anything big. A nice craft store, with supplies to make stuff. I was walking downtown one day, and couldn't find a craft store."

Laurie Nicholas, Westport

"Fresh fruit and vegetables that are always affordable, not just when they're on sale. Like Columbia Fruit and Produce. You could stock up for the whole week, or just get a few things."

Mandi Anderson, Astoria

"I'd love to see a bigger quilt shop that brings in more variety and interesting newer lines of stuff. I'd love to see a place where people can eat and drink and play games — a great way to spend a rainy winter."

Carol Folk, Astoria

Knight Cancer Institute lands a big scientific name

By KRISTIAN FODEN-VENCIL
Oregon Public Broadcasting

Oregon Health and Science University Dr. Gordon Mills is joining the Knight Cancer Institute.

The Knight Cancer Institute has snagged a big scientific fish. Dr. Gordon Mills runs the Institute for Personalized Therapy at the Anderson Cancer Center in Houston — the largest cancer center in the world. Mills, who holds more than 20 patents, is now headed to Oregon to figure out what combination of drugs is most effective on what kinds of tumors.

Instead of taking just one biopsy of a tumor when a cancer is first discovered, he plans to take biopsies every four to six weeks as a patient is treated.

"In the past we simply treated patients until they have a great outcome, which is what we're hoping for, or in far too many cases the tumor progresses," he said. "The goal is to understand what is happening in real time to that patient and that tumor and adapt our therapy to those changes."

Undergoing a biopsy can be painful for the patient. But the institute is trying to develop new tests that are less painful, cheaper and more reliable. For example, tests that find cancer tumors

DNA in the blood, urine or saliva. "We are at an inflection point where we are changing the whole outcome for cancer patients," Mills said. "The idea of being able to focus in on this key critical question of what makes each person's cancer different, and having the team that is dedicated to putting that in place was what drew me to the Knight Cancer Institute and OHSU." The director of the OHSU Knight Cancer Institute, Brian Druker, said Mills is a world leader in cancer research. "He is one of the most credentialed, highly revered scientists in the field of oncology. Gordon understands that precision medicine is about finding what works for the individual patient and I have the utmost confidence that his vision will lift our institute to new heights in our goal to end cancer as we know it." Mills' research focuses on the genomics and genetics of breast and ovarian cancers and identifying and characterizing a number of potential tumor suppressor genes. The OHSU Knight Cancer Institute says Mills will lead the institute's efforts in precision oncology. Mills will begin moving his research to the Knight Cancer Institute over the next months and relocate approximately 15 members of his lab over the next year. His transition is expected to be complete in July 2018. OHSU is a partner with Columbia Memorial Hospital in the Knight Cancer Collaborative in Astoria.

Clatsop County joins Green Power Partnership

The Daily Astorian
Clatsop County received a rare distinction last week from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. It became the first county in Oregon and second in the nation to join the EPA's Green Power Partnership. Membership was dependent upon the county's commitment to purchasing at least 10 percent of its annual electricity supply for its operations from renewable sources such as solar, wind and water. The county Board of Commissioners voted to make the commitment in March. The commitment is part the county's partnership with Pacific Power's Blue Sky Program. As part of that partnership, the county set a goal of 3 percent solar participation rate among residents and businesses. In exchange for participation, the county will receive a one-kilowatt solar installation, likely to be placed at one of its buildings by early next year.

Portions of Old Highway 30 closed during daytime

The Daily Astorian
Part of Old Highway 30 will be closed during daytime hours today and Thursday. A section of the highway between Koppich Road and Dave Road will be closed from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days. Clatsop County Public Works will be installing a new storm line in the area.

OBITUARIES

William 'Bill' Coleman Ocean Park, Washington March 5, 1934 — Oct. 4, 2017

William "Bill" Coleman, 81, died at his Ocean Park residence on the morning of Oct. 4, 2017. A native of Yakima, Washington, he was born March 5, 1934, the son of William and Marie (LaRaunce) Coleman. William grew up on the family farm, attended St. Joseph's Grade School, as a teen worked at the Horseshoe Cafe operated by his family, and played sports at Marquette High School in Yakima. From 1956 until 1958 he served in the Army. On Nov. 18, 1972 he married Judith, and they established their residence in Yakima. A beautician for over 30 years, William and Judy owned and operated Mr. Lee's Beauty School in Yakima for 16 years. In 1984, he moved to the Long Beach Peninsula. William was employed at Okie's Sentry Market in Ocean Park for eight years, and at the Crab Pot Lounge in Long Beach for six years, until retirement. In his leisure time, William enjoyed fishing, gardening, horse races and crafts, but most of all, his marriage to Judy. He was a member of St. Peter's Episcopal Parish in Seaview. Besides his wife at the family home in Ocean Park, William is survived by daughters Kris (Brian) Thiesfeld of Electric City, Washington, and Sarah Sue (Baxter) Wilson of Portland, Maine; son William David Coleman of Seattle, Washington; sister Delores Lee of Marysville, Washington; and other members of his extended family. He was preceded in death by his parents and three siblings. No services are planned. His guest book is available at www.penttilaschapel.com
