

MICHAEL ORWICK OILS

Last year my wife, eleven-year-old daughter and I took the year off from "real life" to travel the world. We visited twenty-one countries and painted with over 500 inspiring children from various orphanages and schools as part of our cause, which we called Studio Everywhere. This year it is my goal to reflect on that trip and create works of art that celebrate that special chapter in our lives.

KATHY HASTINGS PHOTO ENCAUSTIC

Listening to Stones The abbeys of Holy Isle and Iona, Alnwick castle, old boats in Scotland, Iceland vistas ... those are some of the things I photographed last year. But who were they who chose the stones, built the shrines, paved the roads? To honor those who have gone before, I layered images of textured headstones, sometimes including the inscriptions, with the images of buildings and landscapes — my response to what was and what is, as we all spin together in this vortex of time.

ANTON PAVLENKO OILS

The excitement of travel always inspires me to do some of my most memorable work. And now my first impressions of Spain are forever locked into the paintings I created there. For three weeks, I packed my gear each morning and wandered the streets of Barcelona and Valencia until I was tired, hungry and lost. I painted without an agenda--simply allowing all my senses to guide and arrest me at the right place to paint. Sometimes the scenery was too irresistible -- other times I'd stop to paint and enjoy an espresso. The artistic history, rich food (oh the food!) and warm culture all uniquely influenced how I captured and interpreted this beautiful country through my medium.
