The Astoria Downtown Historic District Association will hold the annual downtown holiday lighting Saturday evening.

Downtown Astoria dons plaid, lightens up

The Daily Astorian

The Astoria Downtown Historic District Association will hold a holiday shopping season kickoff Friday through Sunday.

The first event is Plaid Friday, when shoppers are encouraged to wear plaid and shop local as an alternative to Black Friday. Select downtown businesses will be giving raffle tickets to customers for a downtown shopping spree. Those who shop at three or more participating stores will earn a reusable canvas shopping bag.

For a full list of participating businesses, visit <http://tinyurl.com/y8y69elc>

The winner of the raffle will be announced during the downtown holiday lighting in front of the Liberty Theater at 12th and Commercial streets 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

'Green Friday' urges people to 'opt outside'

State wildlife, parks waive some fees, rules

The Daily Astorian

Instead of shopping Black Friday deals after Thanksgiving, Oregon's parks and wildlife departments want people to celebrate "Green Friday."

The Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife is waiving all fishing licensing requirements in areas open to recreational fishing on Friday and Saturday so people can "opt outside" with friends and family over the long holiday weekend.

The waiver includes all fishing, crabbing and clamming across the state.

Some crabbing restrictions are in place due to elevated levels of the marine toxin domoic acid and ocean crabbing is closed. Recreational crabbing is open in bays and estuaries, docks, piers and on beaches from Coos Bay's north jetty to Tahkenitch Creek and north of Cape Foulweather to the Columbia River.

The department stocked lakes and reservoirs across Oregon with trout at the beginning of the month.

Some western Oregon lakes were restocked the week of Thanksgiving, including Progress Lake in Tigard, Waverly Lake in Albany, Faraday Lake in Estacada, Walter Wirth Lake and Walling Pond in Salem, and Alton Baker Canal in Springfield, among others.

Winter steelhead also become available at this time, with Thanksgiving typically marking the beginning of the season on the coast.

Take a hike

Prefer a hike? The Oregon Parks and Recreation Department is waiving day-use parking fees in 26 of the state's parks the day after Thanksgiving.

"We started this tradition three years ago to encourage people to opt outside," said Director Lisa Sumption in a statement. "Why not get some fresh air with your family and create a new holiday tradition?"

The nonprofit Oregon State Parks Foundation is celebrating by offering free hot drinks and snacks at a number of state parks including at Fort Stevens State Park outside Hammond.

The refreshments will be served by volunteers from local friends groups. Fort Stevens requires a parking fee at its Coffenburg Lake site, where there is a boat launch, picnic areas and a hiking trail around the dune lake.

Park Service extends comment period for proposed fee hike

Associated Press

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK, Ariz. — The National Park Service is giving people more time to weigh in on a proposed fee increase at 17 of its most popular parks.

Visitors would be charged $70 per vehicle, up from the current $30 fee, during the five busiest months of the year. At others, the hike is from $25 to $70.

The comment period had been scheduled to end today. The new deadline is Dec. 22.

The Park Service said it wanted to accommodate interest from Congress and the public. More than 65,000 comments already have been submitted.

Most of the 17 sites are in the West, including Grand Canyon, Yosemite, Yellowstone, Zion and Mount Rainier. Fort Clatsop National Memorial is not on the list.

The Park Service says it would raise $70 million annually under the proposal. The revenue would fund maintenance and infrastructure projects.

Poll: Many want to avoid political talk this Thanksgiving

President Donald Trump pardons Drumstick during the National Thanksgiving Turkey Pardoning Ceremony in the Rose Garden of the White House in Washington on Tuesday.

WASHINGTON — Pass the turkey — but maybe hold the politics. The already-fraught topic now includes allegations of sexual misconduct against politicians of various political stripes.

From GOP President Donald Trump to Democratic Sen. Al Franken, politicians past, present and aspiring stand accused of sexual misconduct and that could keep tensions high at the holiday table. More than a third of Americans dread the prospect of politics coming up over Thanksgiving, a new poll shows.

Glenn Rogers, a Republican from Los Angeles, says he asks people around the table to talk about things to celebrate from the past year. Not everyone, he knows, will be toasting the Trump presidency.

"For the most part, we get to the point where we know that we're not going to agree with each other and it gets dropped," says the 67-year-old manufacturing consultant, who says he voted less for Trump than against Democrat Hillary Clinton.

With a cascade of sexual misconduct scandals now echoing similar allegations against Trump during the campaign, tempers on the subject of Trump may not have cooled, says Rogers. "When you start talking about it now, there's still some, I think, real animosity when you start talking about character."

Third dread discussions

Rogers is among more than a third of Americans who say they dread the prospect of politics coming up over Thanksgiving, compared with just 2 in 10 who say they're eager to talk politics, according to a new poll by the Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research. Four in 10 don't feel strongly either way.

Democrats are slightly more likely than Republicans to say they're uneasy about political discussions at the table, 39 percent to 33 percent. And women are more likely than men to say they dread the thought of talking politics, 41 percent to 31 percent.

Those who do think there's at least some possibility of politics coming up are somewhat more likely to feel optimistic about it than Americans as a whole. Among this group, 30 percent say they'd be eager to talk politics and 34 percent would dread it.

The debate over whether to talk politics at Thanksgiving is about as American as the traditional feast itself. By Christmas 2016, 39 percent of U.S. adults said their families avoided conversations about politics, according to the Pew Research Center.

Debate over standards

But Americans are still trying to figure out how to talk about the subject in the age of Trump and amid the sexual misconduct allegations that have ignited a new debate over standards for conduct between men and women. The conversation, some analysts and respondents say, touches on identity among people who group themselves by other factors, such as family, friendship or geography.

Ten months into Trump's difficult presidency, he remains a historically unpopular president and a deeply polarizing force in the United States. His drives to crack down on immigration in the name of national security and the economy cut right to the question of who is an American. And his defense on Tuesday of Republican U.S. Senate candidate Roy Moore, the former Alabama judge accused by six women of pursuing romantic relationships with them when they were teenagers and he was in his 30s, comes amid a wider deluge of sexual misconduct scandals.

For any mention of Moore, who denies the accusations against him, there's Franken of Minnesota, who has apologized or said he feels bad about the allegations against him.
