Birthday: Love demands more than a gift card, trinket or Facebook post

Continued from Page 1C

The adventure and itinerary was slowing down, and we spent time just being together. Activities like reflecting on the poetry of Emily Dickinson and E.E. Cummings etched into the sculptures are more meaningful than the candles and balloons of a typical birthday celebration.

One of the art pieces reads: "The bones of the parents are the nursery of the young," referring specifically to the migratory life cycle of salmon and their spawning grounds, but can apply to life and family in a deeper

Love demands more

We headed back to downtown Astoria for some window shopping - meandered through RiverSea Gallery, perusing jewelry, arts, prints and sculptures from local Northwest artists. We visited Pilot House Distillery, and (since it was her birthday, after all) mother enjoyed a flight of their house-crafted vodkas and gins, along with some great conversation on the history of their operations and their passion for supporting Wigglin Home's Boxer Rescue.

We battled the wind and rain and made our way over to Luminari Arts and Forsythea galleries on Commercial Street, both of which featured wonderful selections of handcrafted cards, unique gifts, custom decor and artisan products from Northwest artists and goods makers. These two places alone are worth a couple of hours of your time.

We closed out the birthday with a lunch at Fort George Brewery of house hash and shrimp and grits, highlighted by flickering lights and a power outage, which always remind me of stormy winter days with a fire roaring, blankets and a good book.

Simple things such as this often occupy my mind. Quiet time spent with people I love. Activities that grow my knowledge of history and understanding of nature. Reflections that challenge my mind and conceptions about the world we live in.

Anyone can buy a gift card, a trinket or write a Facebook post. But I find that love demands more.
